

Punishment for Crime Requires Revision--Phil

Says Pardon Board's Records Show Flaws In System MAPS PROPOSALS Favors Shorter Sentences, Work, Periods of Parole

Madison—(P)—Governor LaFollette told the first Wisconsin Conference for Crime Control today that records of the state pardon board show the system of fixing punishment for crimes needs revision in Wisconsin.

"We need far more short sentences, periods of detention, then work, then a period of parole," the governor said.

Approximately 200 persons gathered at the Memorial Union on the University of Wisconsin campus to hear the chief executive open the second day's session of the conference.

"One important thing the pardon board is doing is to bring sentences in the state into better harmony," he added.

"There is no reason why if you live in a certain district of the state and commit a crime you should be sentenced to six or seven years, while if you live in another section you would get parole or one year for the same offense."

The governor explained that 90 per cent of all pardon applicants seek commutation of sentences. Other groups are those seeking restoration of citizenship, cases where the individual claims he is innocent and those who are pardoned to permit or prevent deportation.

Defends Pardons

One significant factor about law enforcement, the governor said, is that "double-barreled pleas" in which the applicant claims he is innocent and also that he has reformed have almost ceased. He urged the audience not to judge hastily "when you read in the newspaper that a pardon has been granted."

He cited an instance of a man sentenced to four years for statutory rape of a girl who had a long record of delinquency. In this case, he contended, the issuance of a pardon was justified although it may not have appeared so on the surface statement of facts.

"We welcome the creation of a pardon board in Wisconsin, because we all know the importance of judging all facts, and we want someone in whom we have confidence to pass on them," he declared.

Inspector L. C. Schilder, chief of the identification division, federal bureau of investigation, Washington, D. C., told the conference last night that the G-men have introduced a new trend in criminal prosecution.

"Hangers-on" Targets

"We've been a little too content to get the leaders, the trigger men and let the hangers-on, the unethical lawyers and doctors, the money-changers, go free," Schilder said.

"This new trend has put the fear of the law into these hangers-on, and made crime unprofitable."

An aroused public opinion is doing more than all the law officers of the nation to stamp out crime, he declared.

Two police chiefs, Joseph Kluchewsky, Milwaukee, and William McCormick, Madison, urged the creation of a central bureau of crime investigation in Wisconsin, preferably at the University of Wisconsin, and the establishment of a state police radio system. They expressed disappointment over opposition raised by the Wisconsin Sheriffs' association to these proposals.

Death Penalty Measure Shelved by Committee

Madison—(P)—The assembly judiciary committee recommended indefinite postponement today of consideration of the bill by Assemblyman Martin Frankowski (D), Milwaukee, fixing the death penalty for persons who kidnap children under 16 years.

The committee's recommendation indicated the bill would be side-tracked for the remainder of the session.

Illinois City May Move to Get Away From Flood Threats

Shawneetown, Ill. —(P)—Shawneetown, the state's oldest city, may go the way of Kaskaskia, its historical predecessor.

Tired of the destructive forces of recurring floods, Shawneetown, its buildings and homes in shambles, was considering calling it quits—just as Kaskaskia did in the last century—and move several miles from the Ohio river.

A legislative committee headed by Lieutenant Governor John Stettin planned to meet here today with Congressman Claude V. Parsons, Mayor William Brinkley and other officials to discuss the feasibility of moving the town.

Shawneetown experienced serious floods in 1832, 1847, 1858, 1859, and 1913, and disastrous high water swept the community in 1882, 1883, 1884 and 1898. Twenty-seven lives were lost in 1898.

New Sit-Down Strikes as Old Ones are Ended

Disputes Expected in Coal, Steel and Railway Fields

27,000 AFFECTED

Negotiators Strive to Settle Numerous Labor Controversies

By the Associated Press

Strike lines held taut across the nation today as negotiators sought to compromise differences which kept an estimated 27,000 employees in idleness.

Industrial unrest still affected automotive, aviation, ship building, shoe manufacturing, printing, baking, steel, electric equipment, wall paper, watch case making and electric power plants in scattered areas from coast to coast.

Rumblings of discontent were heard from the bituminous coal, steel and railway transportation fields, where unions were formulating demands for pay increases.

Sit-down strikers evacuated two plants peacefully upon court orders.

Two score ended their two day sit-down at Decatur, Ill., where the Century Wall Paper company re-opened operations. Another sit-down of 11 pie bakers in Los Angeles, Calif., resulted in surrender of the strikers.

Reach Agreement

A one-day sit-down of 944 printers at the Crowell Publishing company plant in Springfield, Ohio, lifted with an agreement for union recognition and wage increase negotiations.

A wage boost of 15 per cent for 14,000 shoe and leather workers in the Boston area ended a one-day strike, but union leaders pressed a drive for similar concessions in the Haverhill, Mass., shoe center.

Settlements also were reached in the Ferry-Morse Seed Co., Arvory corporation and the Palace Model Laundry plants, all in Detroit. But several new strikes, mostly affecting small groups, were called in that city.

New Sit-Down Started at the Vulcan Corporation, Manufacturers of shoe laces and wooden heels in Portsmouth, Ohio, employees of 500. Company officials said 200 sat down, but that no demands had been made.

WPA Workers Strike

In Spokane, Wash., 200 unionized WPA workers, set down in district headquarters demanding recognition of their group as sole bargaining agency and increased working hours.

Chrysler Automobile corporation, employing 77,000 workers, agreed to confer with officials of the United Automobile Workers' union next week to consider the latter's demands, including union recognition, U.A.W.A. and General Motors corporation conferences achieved tentative agreements on seniority rights, speed of production and methods of pay.

Republicans Fail to Curb Trade Program

Washington—(P)—Administration forces crushed the first Republican effort in the senate to restrict the reciprocal trade program.

An amendment by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) prohibiting any trade agreement which would restrict power of congress over internal taxes was rejected without a record vote.

Vandenberg immediately introduced a second amendment requiring all trade agreements to guarantee the American cost of production.

The vote was taken in the midst of a Republican assault on proposed extension for three years of the reciprocal trade program.

Senator Steiwer (R-Ore.), leading the attack, said trade agreements had "settled" the traditional policy of tariff protection.

Attempt to Identify Three Holdup Suspects

Milwaukee—(P)—Three robber suspects were viewed in a police showup today by victims of several recent holdups here.

One of the men was captured in an alley after a four block chase through downtown Milwaukee yesterday in which three shots were fired by a detective. Two companions were picked up later.

One of three men standing on a crowded downtown street corner was recognized by detectives as a suspect in the robbery yesterday of John Behrendt, Port Washington, former Ozaukee county sheriff. Police said Behrendt identified a picture of the man as one of two who jumped into his automobile and took $117 from him.

Police said the suspects denied knowledge of the holdups.

Petroleum Association Supports Cashman Bill

Milwaukee—(P)—The Cashman bill setting aside all gasoline tax and automobile license funds for highway maintenance had the endorsement today of delegates to the annual Wisconsin Petroleum association convention.

The convention also urged repeal of the federal gasoline tax and expressed disapproval of the proposed federal tax of 1 cent on fuel oil.

Warren C. Platt, Cleveland, editor of the National Petroleum News, told delegates yesterday mass marketing in the oil business was on the way out because big companies, he said, were gradually realizing the small jobber is the most efficient unit in distribution.

BULLETIN

(Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau)

Oshkosh—Joseph Martell, former Menasha police department desk sergeant, today was sentenced to state prison at Waupun, for one to three years as an accessory before the fact in the theft of $4,000 worth of slot machines at Menasha. Sentence is to start Friday noon.

Municipal Court Judge Henry P. Hughes, in pronouncing sentence, said that Martell's offense was extremely serious because he had been an officer of the law.

Melvin S. Crowley, Menasha, was Martell's attorney and asked that Martell be given permission to see his family. Judge Hughes stated that he would probably be permitted a brief visit this evening.

No Action Seen on Proposed Tax on Cigarets, Cigars

Assembly Committee Recommends Indefinite Postponement for Bill

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin tobacco growers, dealers and retailers swamped the assembly education committee today with demands that the legislature strike out the cigarette and cigar tax features of a proposed $3,000,000 high school aid bill.

The committee learned yesterday at the first hearing on the bill, sponsored by the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, that all interested persons favored more state aid to high schools, but that the tobacco tax, accompanied by a levy on cosmetics, will encounter strenuous opposition.

The committee recommended on the floor today that action of the bill be postponed indefinitely, virtually inflicting a death blow to the proposed tax.

Speakers for tobacco interests and general retailers claimed the tax, which amounts to 2 cents a package of cigarettes and 20 per cent of the cost of cigars and cosmetics, will injure tobacco farmers and merchants and produce a disappointing amount of revenue.

Frederick N. MacMillin, secretary of the league, said his organization is interested in reducing general property taxes and would not object if the legislature provides

Townsend Will File Plea for New Trial

Washington—(P)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, predicting eventual exoneration, helped his attorney draft a plea today for a new trial in an effort to overturn his conviction of contempt of the house of representatives.

The elderly California physician, who heard the verdict yesterday without emotion, said an appeal would be taken to a higher court if the request was denied.

Justice Peyton Gordon delayed sentence for three days. He can impose a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and a year in jail.

NEW U. S. GRAND JURY

Milwaukee—(P)—District Attorney B. J. Eustling said a new federal grand jury would be convened next Tuesday to investigate approximately 60 criminal cases.

Haile's Son-in-Law Executed After Italian Scouting Party Captures Him

Addis Ababa—(P)—Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of Haile Selassie and last of the Ethiopian chieftains to dispute Italian occupation, has been captured and executed, an official communique announced today.

He was killed yesterday immediately after an Italian scouting party seized him in the mountain region west of the lakes stretching south of Addis Ababa.

The fascist soldiers surprised the ras with a few followers. There was a quick exchange of shots, then capture.

The death was interpreted by informed circles as marking the removal of the final vestiges of organized resistance to Italy's colonization of Haile Selassie's former domain. Colonial authorities believed Ras Desta's forces were the only sizeable opposition to Italian rule.

Borah Offers Amendment on States' Rights

Would Let Them Handle Own Social and Economic Problems

COURT FIGHT RAGES

Idaho Senator Would Rewrite 14th Amendment To Constitution

Washington—(P)—Senator Borah (R-Idaho) introduced today a constitutional amendment to limit the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment so as to permit states to handle social and economic problems within their own borders.

Borah's proposed amendment would repeal the fourteenth amendment and rewrite it to limit the due process clause to procedure, rather than substance, of laws.

He told newspaper men it would make constitutional the New York minimum wage law, which the supreme court held invalid last year.

Borah tossed his proposal into the legislative hopper without comment on the senate floor, as the battle was raging warmer and warmer over President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the supreme court in an effort to broaden the federal government's power to handle such problems.

Would Limit U. S.

The Idaho senator, a long-time student of constitutional problems and one of the outstanding opponents of President Roosevelt's proposal, said it would have a "decided tendency to limit the activity of the federal government" in the field of social and economic legislation.

"These problems of today could be met," the senator told newspaper men. "The state of New York, for instance, ought to be permitted to work out its own problems without being censured by a foreign government, which the federal government is so far as local problems are concerned."

"My amendment would give the states full power to handle social and economic problems within their states. Their laws could not be set aside provided the procedure was regular. The due process clause would be limited to procedure. The supreme court has held it covers the substance of legislation."

Favor Rejection of Consolidation Bill

Madison—(P)—Rejection of a bill to permit consolidation of the duties of Milwaukee aldermen and Milwaukee county supervisors was recommended today by the senate committee on state and local government.

The bill, introduced by Senators Harold Schoenecker (D), Milwaukee, provided that supervisors whose districts lie within the city limits of Milwaukee, assume the duties of the aldermen of those wards.

In one assembly district lying partly within and partly outside the city limits, separate aldermen and supervisors would be elected.

Suspect Eliminated In Slaying of Child

Janesville, Wis.—(P)—Authorities of Du Page county, Ill., eliminated today Harold Christian, 24, alias John Pruett, as a suspect in the sex slaying of 5-year-old Roger Loomis of Lombard, Ill., on Feb. 4.

Allan Myers, investigator for the state's attorney's office of Du Page county, said he was satisfied Pruett was not the man wanted. He and John Hesterman, chief deputy sheriff of the county, checked over statements Pruett made to Chicago police, regarding his movements about Janesville.

Would Ban Producers as Film Theater Owners

Madison—(P)—The senate committee on corporations and taxation introduced a bill today to bar operation in Wisconsin of any motion picture theater owned or controlled in any way by a producer or distributor of films.

Providing a maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and imprisonment of a year, the measure would make the operation of a movie theater unlawful if even a single share of stock in it were held by a distributor or producer.

Many Wisconsin theaters are owned, controlled, managed or otherwise operated by film producing and distributing corporations.

Five Murderers Face Death After Midnight

Chicago—(P)—Five convicted murderers, two of them women, watched their chances for reprieves fade today as they awaited death in the electric chair after midnight.

The women were Minnie Mitchell, Negress, and Mildred Mary Bolton, slayer of her insurance broker husband, who remarked during her trial "they don't convict women of murder in Cook county."

The others were Joseph Rappaport, convicted slayer of Max Dent, a government informer who was to testify during the former's trial on a narcotics charge; Ruzo Swain, college-bred Negro convicted of slaying a young bride in her hotel room, and Allen Mitchell, husband of Minnie.

Father Is Accused of Chaining, Beating Girl

Crockett, Calif.—(P)—Hissed at times by townspeople, David Locke was defended today at a trial in a men's gymnasium against a charge that he chained his motherless 9-year-old daughter to a bedstead with a dog collar and beat her.

The trial was moved to the gymnasium yesterday by Judge Ray Standish to accommodate the crowd but he threatened today to exclude the public if it continues hissing.

The girl, Myrtle Belle Locke, timidly testified:

"He hit me with a belt on Saturday last Jan. 30 and with his hand on Sunday." Later, she said, "he threw a knife at me at the dinner table."

Badger Assembly Votes April Referendum on Non-Partisan Election

Find Obstacles To Control Plan In Spanish War

Shelling of British Ship Leads to Fears of More Serious Incident

London—(P)—Ticklish points involving the national honor of France and Russia and the "act of God" shelling of a British warship today endangered the international control plan to cut off warring Spain from the rest of Europe.

Authorities admitted the task of setting up the non-intervention system had proved so complicated the plan to throw a patrol net around Spain probably could not be made effective on schedule at midnight March 6.

A subcommittee meeting of the six most interested powers of Britain, France, Russia, Germany, Italy and Portugal, was called for today. However, to salvage as much of the agreement as possible.

Some hope was expressed that a modified blockade, both by land and by sea, would be possible on March 6, leading to complete control by gradual stages.

The subcommittee can do nothing, however, until the objections raised by France to the land patrol and by Russia to the sea patrol are removed.

Despite efforts of official spokesmen to minimize the "mistake" explosion of a Spanish anti-aircraft shell on the deck of the British battleship Royal Oak, concern was aroused lest more serious "incidents" lead to international complications when the patrol was established. Four officers and a seaman were injured by the explosion.

Germany has asked that her ships not be stationed in proximity to those of Russia because of the possibility of some untoward event.

ASKS AMENDMENT

Senator Borah of Idaho today proposed an amendment to the constitution providing for the repeal of the fourteenth amendment. He would then rewrite the latter to permit states to handle their own social and economic problems.

Film Writer Is Found Slain in Desert Cottage

Wife Unable to Tell Coherent Story of Fatal Shooting

Palm Springs, Calif.—(P)—Humphrey Pearson, prominent film writer, was found shot to death in his bed at his desert cottage at midnight here at this wealthy resort.

Deputy Sheriff W. W. Walrath said Pearson's wife, weeping and hysterical, was in the same bed when the tragedy was discovered. She was unable to give a coherent story of what occurred.

Pearson was shot twice through the chest, the deputy said, and had been dead more than an hour before a butler summoned him to the Pearson home. The butler reported his attention had been attracted by Mrs. Pearson's sobs.

Police Chief Lloyd Boller announced later the death pistol had been found, but declined to disclose its location. It had been discharged twice.

Dined With Another Couple

The chief said he learned the Pearsons had dined at a cafe with another couple, leaving about 9:35 p. m. for their residence by automobile.

Pearson was shot an hour later. He and his wife apparently had been drinking, Boller declared, and his body fell across the bed, pinning Mrs. Pearson beneath.

The butler was quoted as saying the Pearsons were strongly devoted to each other. Pearson had been in ill health in recent years, associates said, and spent most of his time at this desert resort. He was about 40.

A former advertising man, he wrote for both the radio and films. He did dialogue for "Roadway Babies" and collaborated on "What Price Hollywood?" His adaptations included "Top Speed," "Going Wild," "Sunny," and "The Great Flirtation."

Restore Serial Number Of Gun Used in Murder

Hackensack, N. J.—(P)—G-man science has removed a major obstacle to finding the owner of a gun used in the murder of R. Norman Redwood, New York "sandhog" union leader, Bergen county Police Chief Peter J. Siccardi said today.

The federal bureau of investigation laboratories at Washington restored the filed-off serial number, he said, and the purchaser's name was expected today from the manufacturer.

He said he hoped the records of the factory at Hartford, Conn., eventually would lead to the killer.

Aid of the Connecticut state police was enlisted in tracing the gun number, as picked detectives of a special New York-New Jersey crime bureau followed other tangled clues.

Two Men Arraigned in Counterfeiting Plot

Milwaukee—(P)—Reuben Affeldt and M. J. O'Connor of Spring Valley, were bound over to the federal grand jury today when arraigned before United States Commissioner Floyd Jenkins on charges of conspiracy to counterfeit currency. Their bond was set at $1,000.

The government charged a counterfeiting ring, with headquarters at Appleton, operated in central Wisconsin. Several spurious $5 bills were passed. A printing press and engraving plates were seized in recent raids.

Charges Callagers Asked To Quit Creditors' Group

Milwaukee—(P)—Counsel for the First Wisconsin National bank contended today that John G. Pallange, interpleaded as a party in the state banking commission's suit against the bank, had been requested to resign from the Liberty State bank's creditors' committee.

The charge was made by Attorney Robert Marx at the trial of the suit to recover securities for loans to the Liberty bank and its president by the First Wisconsin. Marx said the committee repudiated Pallange and that Pallange had "betrayed" Liberty State depositors.

George Affeldt, commission chief counsel, termed Marx's statements "just some more of the defense smoke screen trying to hide the real issues of this case."

Action Must be Completed by March 3, Solons Told

VOTE IS 55 TO 37

Referendum Resolution Affects County Offices

Madison—(P)—Sponsors of a referendum for non-partisan election of county officials finally won a victory in the assembly today with the adoption of a joint resolution to submit the question to the people at the statewide election in April.

The house, by a vote of 55 to 37, approved the resolution for a referendum introduced by Assemblyman Alfred Grosvenor, (D), Kenosha, and Palmer F. Daugs, (D), Ft. Atkinson. It had previously turned down a similar proposal by Assemblyman Charles A. Budlong, (R), Marinette, which also applied to legislative elections.

The proponents, however, had one more hurdle to clear before the question can be placed upon the April ballot. The secretary of state's office advised that action would have to be completed in both houses by March 3.

Assemblyman Daugs attempted to have the resolution sent immediately to the senate so that house could act upon it before it adjourns tomorrow for the weekend, but he could not get the necessary two-thirds vote to suspend the rules.

Hearing Rejected

The opposition, denying a charge of dilatory tactics, moved to send the resolution to the assembly state affairs committee for a public hearing. The motion was voted down, 50 to 40.

Virtually the same arguments voiced for and against the referendum proposal when it was voted down two weeks ago were revived today in a lengthy debate. The audience of the resolution and their adherents contended that Progressive leaders who opposed the resolution were afraid to let the voters express their opinions.

Assemblyman David Sigman, (P), Two Rivers, charged that the proponents were "merely playing politics" and asserted that there is no such thing as true non-partisanship. Assemblyman Francis Yindra, (D), Manitowish, reminded Sigman that the Manitowish county board had supported the idea of a referendum and said the people of that county wanted a chance to vote.

If the senate concurs and the question is placed on the ballot the result will be available to this legislature before it adjourns, but the decision of the voters will only be advisory and will not have any binding effect.

Report Disputes Bill

The joint finance committee reported the Sigman labor disputes bill back to the assembly without change, rejecting an amendment to reduce the appropriation for administering the act from $50,000 to $15,000 and to make the state industrial commission responsible for administering the act.

The bill will come up for passage next Wednesday as a special order of business.

The house passed and sent to the senate three bills providing: prompt settlement by counties of the state school aids owing to school districts and municipalities; uniform rules with other states on extradition of criminals and compelling the attendance of witnesses in criminal proceedings.

A separate bill was introduced in the assembly today to revive an appropriation of $15,000 to the state department of agriculture and markets to continue its WPA program of dairy inspection. The senate refused to approve a similar allotment in another appropriation bill.

British Steamer Strikes Mine Off Spanish Mainland

Marseilles, France—(P)—The British steamer Llandoverly Castle radioed today she had hit a floating mine two miles southeast of the Cape de Creus, the southernmost point on the Spanish mainland.

(Details of the accident to the 10,600-ton steamer were not given in the message. The vessel is owned by the Union-Castle Mail Steamship company, a British company.)

In a second message, the Llandoverly Castle reported two of her holds were filled with water. Her master predicted she would be able to reach Port Vendres, however.

Outagamie County Will Continue Until Easter

Sale of seals to aid crippled will be started by the Outagamie chapter of the Wisconsin Association for the Crippled Monday. The seal sale will continue until Easter Sunday and is being held in connection with the state-wide campaign of the state association.

The sale will be conducted in the county through various organizations and individuals Mrs. S. C. Shannon president of the county chapter is in charge.

They are employed in the capacity of field workers and are giving assistance to the family physicians and local agencies in the matter of arranging for care according to medical recommendation.

The work being done by the field workers is in part in connection with the preparation for and the holding of orphaned field clinics, and the follow-up work in connection with recommendations made at these clinics.

Scientists Seek Blackening Cause In Midwest Tubers

See Need for Elimination
Of Fault to Obtain Top Prices

Scientists at the state agricultural experiment station are seeking causes of the discoloration often found in midwest potatoes after they are cooked, according to R. C. Swanson, county agent.

One of the serious shortcomings of potatoes grown in the middle west, it is said, is that they sometimes tend to discolor after cooking. So, housewives who naturally want their foods to present an attractive appearance occasionally give this as one reason why Wisconsin potatoes are often looked on with less favor than those shipped in from the west. Growers and plant breeders agree that the defect must be prevented if our crop is to sell at top prices.

A year ago, it was announced by officials of the state agricultural experiment station that a lack of potash in the soil apparently is associated with the blackening of potatoes. This finding has been borne out by further trials during the past year, but the scientists at the university are finding potash deficiency is not the only cause of the trouble.

Potash is Factor
Swanson recently was informed that in various locations throughout Wisconsin tubers of several varieties have discolored badly when grown on soils containing abundant nitrogen and phosphorus but less than 200 pounds available potash to the acre. The blackening, they report, is not usually serious when the soil has more than 300 pounds of potash to the acre. In this connection it is said that potatoes which contain less than 1.8 percent potash (on a dry matter basis) almost always blacken when cooked whereas potatoes having more than this percentage of potassium seldom blacken.

A greenhouse trial was made at Madison in which the soil was supplied with 100 pounds per acre of available potash, abundant nitrogen and phosphorus, and also some of the less common elements that may be needed for plant nutrition. Under these conditions a heavy crop of potatoes that did not blacken after cooking was secured, even though the potash supply was low. This, it is claimed, suggests that one of the rarer elements used may have helped to prevent discoloration.

2-Year Study
For two years, W. E. Totttingham and his associates at the state agricultural experiment station, have studied the question of whether the conditions under which potatoes are stored have any influence on the blackening. It was thought possible that differences in temperature and ventilation might be factors here. However, the evidence uncovered so far tends to show that these matters are not important.

The immediate chemical reason that potatoes discolor seems to be that they contain too great an amount of free amino acids, especially tyrosine and tryptophan, in proportion to protein," explain the state chemists. "In the presence of an enzyme, tyrosinase, acts upon the tyrosine to form a black pigment called melanin. Cooking the potatoes speeds up the blackening because it ruptures the cells, and thus allows more air to get in."

Extensive field tests, being conducted at present on the farm of Anton Reznick, near Antigo and on the Hancock branch station farm are designed especially to learn how the supply of potassium affects the tuber, and also whether large amounts of nitrogen or lime in potato soils tend to bring about blackening in the product.

Proponents of the bill included Thomas Davlin chairman of the highway commission and Commissioners T. J. Pattison and William E. O'Brien, Secretary of State Theodore Damman, West A. Budick, state safety director, and Sidney Williams of the National Safety Council.

Burdick declared the present law was recognized as below standard. "It has no teeth," he said, telling the committee he knew of six applicants for blind persons who possessed drivers' licenses.

Hupfauf to Ask State Funds For Park on Lake Winnebago

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)
Madison—State funds for the proposed Calumet county park in the town of Stockbridge and on the shore of Lake Winnebago will be asked by Assemblyman Henry Hupfauf (D), Darby, representing the Calumet county district.

Mr. Hupfauf reported yesterday in the legislature for the improvement of the area which the Calumet county board has decided to buy, a 175-acre wooded tract in the western part of the county. Hupfauf estimated that approximately $50,000 will be required to finance improvements on the park land.

Hupfauf has been informed by Roland E. Miller, Calumet county clerk that the county has decided to buy the 175 acre site at a price of $22,400 which will be financed through loans from county banks with county tax certificates as collateral. No loans have yet been made, however, according to Miller.

Officials of Calumet county have attempted, vainly, to obtain state aid for their park project for the last four years. In the last session of the legislature Assemblyman John Short, then representing the county, asked for an appropriation, but his request was vetoed.

At present, however, Mr. Hupfauf is hopeful for the success of his efforts, and has been encouraged by said, by officials of the state conservation department.

Leader in the movement to obtain the park has been George Schaefer, member of the county board of supervisors, and chairman of the town of Harrison.

Organized cheese makers sent telegrams to Senator Mack and other members of the legislature's upper house asking support of the appropriation which would have provided for the expenses of the dairy inspectors, whose salaries are paid out of federal funds.

The appropriation was defeated through the efforts of farmers in the senate, who maintained that the inspectors are worthless. Among those who led in the denunciations was Senator John Cashman, who declared that most of them do not know from what side a cow is milked.

It is believed, however, that an effort will be made to revive the appropriation measure, which has the support of the state department of agriculture and markets.

The class in unusual foods under Mrs. Wickesberg has been discontinued for the remainder of the school year. Students completed their work in the course last Monday.

Lenen dishes featuring eggs and fish are being prepared by students in food classes under Miss Mabel Burke. A luncheon prepared today by students included deviled eggs on toast, fresh green cabbage and cottage pudding.

Discuss Proposal To Limit Powers Of Badger Group

Conservation Commission
Attacked at Assembly Hearing

Madison—The first of several pending proposals to reduce the regulatory powers of the state conservation commission was discussed before the assembly committee on conservation.

O. J. G. Peters of Portage, who said he represented 2,000 sportsmen in Columbia and nearby counties, attacked a general attack on the commission with a request that the legislature investigate it. He also recommended that the legislature, instead of the commission, fix the dates of fishing and hunting seasons.

Peters told the committee that the bill introduced at his request by Assemblyman Robert Roche (D), Portage, contains only a part of the conservation law changes that will be proposed during the session.

Roche's Proposals
Roche's bill would permit sale of game fish caught with hook and line during the open season, repeal the rod and reel license law, take the size limit off all fish caught with hook and line except black and Oswego bass, pike, pickerel, muskellunge and catfish, to require mark some of the money obtained from hunting licenses for allotment to farmers who possess hunting grounds and will permit general free hunting privileges at a fee of 25 cents an acre.

Peters also urged that the confiscation act be repealed. He charged that game wardens have turned the law to racketeering because the measure provides that one-half of the money from sale of confiscated property shall be placed into the game warden's pension fund.

H. W. MacKenzie, director of the conservation department, denied that wardens make numerous arrests for "small technical violations." He said the pension fund enabled the department to retire 16 wardens over 70 years on pension, thereby improving the service with younger men.

Hearing March 16 on Pollution of River

Madison—The state board of health and committee on water pollution announced today that a joint hearing will be held at Appleton March 16 on complaint of 200 citizens that waste materials discharged from a paper mill into the Peshigo river are a menace to health.

Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, and Adolph Karmenber, chairman of the state committee on water pollution said the hearing will start at 9 o'clock a. m. in the city hall.

The complaint stated that the Badger Paper Mills, Inc. of Peshigo, is discharging untreated waste which is a menace to health of residents along the river, kills fish and sets up an intolerable stench during the summer months.

Karmenber reported a preliminary investigation indicated the complaint was well founded. The complaint was filed Feb. 20.

Office Equipment Is Installed at Plant

With installation of office equipment at the sewage disposal plant completed, work at the site has been practically completed according to Clarence Baetz, superintendent. Industrial connections with the except on of the interlake mill have been completed. A final check is now being made on the work.

The "heaven" fire since the completion of the plant, as recorded last Saturday, was a result of the heavy rain, but no trouble was reported.

Extension Division Bill Given Approval

Madison—The senate, by a vote of 17 to 11, passed today a bill by Senator Robert Karmenber (P), Wausau, to appropriate $165,000 for construction of a University of Wisconsin extension college at Waupesa. The measure was passed, then reported and rejected an amendment that would have made the appropriation contingent on the revenue derived from the emergency telephone fund.

Committees Get Flood of Suggestions at Hearing On Drivers' License Bill

Madison—Senate and assembly highway committees sifted a long list of suggestions today about automobile drivers' licenses gleaned from a public hearing on the Cashman bill designed to strengthen the licensing law.

With two substitute measures already presented, the committees sought a final draft of the bill to cover points raised at the hearing yesterday. They planned another hearing.

Arthur Hellerman, attorney who worked with the highway commission and Senator John Cashman (P), Denmark, in framing the provisions, outlined these principal features of the bill.

Physical qualifications—The applicant would appear before a county traffic officer to show a knowledge of the highway code, at least 50 percent vision and ability to hear when addressed in a natural tone of voice by a person standing a foot behind. Mental disability, color blindness and loss of both hands or both feet would be other bars. The secretary of state, however, could issue a license to a color blind or deaf person of proved driving ability.

Revocation Provisions
Loss of license—Revocation for one to three years would be mandatory upon conviction for drunken driving, negligent homicide, or hit-and-run driving. Three convictions within a year for reckless driving would result in suspension of the license until financial liability for accidents was established.

Renewal of licenses—Each license would expire in three years. Record on card—Convictions for violations would be stamped on the back of the license.

T. M. Bray, Delavan, superintendent of the state school for the deaf, asked assurance there would be no discrimination against deaf persons who, he said, were among the best drivers.

Other suggestions presented at the hearing
Assigning examinations to the sheriff rather than traffic officers. Renewal of licenses every five years instead of three.

Placing all matters dealing with cars under the motor vehicle division.

Requiring stop-and-go signs to show the words "stop" and "Go" as well as red and green lights, for the benefit of the color blind.

Object to Proposals
Removal of the suspension section relative to three convictions for minor violations in a year.

Barring the public from reading the driver's record, to be kept by the secretary of state under the bill.

There were several objections to placing examinations in the hands of traffic officers. Senator Joseph McDermid (P) Ladysmith questioned the ability of the officers to determine applicants' vision.

The committees received an offer from the state optometrists' association to coach the officers in the use of simple tests of ability to read signs.

Proponents of the bill included Thomas Davlin chairman of the highway commission and Commissioners T. J. Pattison and William E. O'Brien, Secretary of State Theodore Damman, West A. Budick, state safety director, and Sidney Williams of the National Safety Council.

Burdick declared the present law was recognized as below standard. "It has no teeth," he said, telling the committee he knew of six applicants for blind persons who possessed drivers' licenses.

Personality of Washington Saved America, Says Cox

First United State President Was Always Gentleman, Kiwanians Told

"Washington's character and personality, not his statesmanship or his military genius, were responsible for the saving of America," Dr. Gilbert S. Cox said in a talk on "Washington the Statesman" at a meeting of the Appleton Kiwanis club Wednesday noon at the Conway hotel.

Americans often are regarded by Englishmen as unkempt and disreputable, but Washington could have gone into the home of any Englishman and graced the occasion because he was primarily and essentially a gentleman, Dr. Cox said.

In speaking of Washington's character Dr. Cox told of the feeling of suspicion between Massachusetts and Virginia when Washington took over the country after independence was won. "It was his character more than anything else that created, launched and sustained the government."

"He was a man, strong of body, virile, athletic and he loved sports, yet he was practical. The practical side of the 'father of our country' is shown in the fact that when he was 18 years old he had saved money enough to purchase 300 acres of land."

Dr. Cox went on to tell of Washington's love for beauty and expressed the opinion that culture in the United States is sometimes under-stressed. A visit to Mount Vernon shows Washington's inclination towards beauty in the construction and furnishings of his home, Dr. Cox said.

Kept Balance
"Washington kept a balance between virility and reverence," the speaker stated. "It is probable that he did not marry the woman he loved, but he left nothing undone to make his home beautiful, cultured and safe for his wife. His reverence again was shown in his attitude toward slavery and the provisions he made in his will regarding the care of his own slaves. "Washington's reverence is revealed in the incident when he was found kneeling in the snow during the war with England and offering the country into the hands of the Lord."

First Graders Build Library as Project

Conference for Control Asks Radio Network and Bureau of Identification

Madison—(U)—Penologists recommended to the Wisconsin Conference for Control today that the state establish a network of radio stations and well equipped bureau of criminal identification to aid the war against lawbreakers.

Police Chief John T. Sullivan of Kenosha told the conference that a police radio system not only is an effective method of interrupting and catching criminals, but is an actual deterrent to the commission of crime.

Sullivan said a radio system has been an effective arm of enforcement at Kenosha, reducing the time element so that crimes can be interrupted while in progress.

"It is very obvious," he said, "that in a city with radio equipped cars a criminal is discouraged from working in that community since he realizes his chances are slim. For once a crime has been committed, radio takes its place as the longest arm of the police department, the speediest methods of capturing the fleeing criminal. Previously a start of a few minutes gave the fugitive a decided advantage."

Central Zone Stations
Chief Sullivan said that if a state communications network is organized, the zone control station should be in the geographical center of the inter-state message pickup and delivery system. He said the wishes of police departments in establishing suitable boundaries usually meet with the approval of the federal communications commission.

Prof. J. H. Mathews of the University of Wisconsin, nationally known ballistics expert, prepared a paper for the conference in which he predicted the war against crime will be a losing one unless each state "wakes up to the necessity of the establishment of crime detection bureaus and laboratories."

"There should be in every state," he said "a department of justice working in cooperation with the federal department on interstate cases and doing its own job in the state where it is located."

Enforcement Lags
"Unfortunately our law enforcement agencies are in many respects very much in the ox-cart age. The criminal, on the other hand, has adapted himself to twentieth century conditions, and until the law enforcement agencies are at least as well equipped as the criminal, no effective law enforcement can be expected."

Prof. Mathews said that training of special investigators is more important than providing material equipment. He predicted that within a few years some of the universities will be offering courses in crime detection and identification.

Constipated 30 Years

"For thirty years I had stubborn constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pains in the back. Adenika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, etc., anything I want and never feel better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life."

—Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you with Adenika. Many report action in thirty minutes after taking just one dose. Adenika gives complete action, clearing your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. South, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adenika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and gives your bowels a real cleansing with Adenika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. At all leading druggists."

Says Trade Agreements Helped Paper Industry

New York—Assistant Secretary of Commerce Ernest C. Draper credited reciprocal trade agreements today with facilitating the climb of American paper products in foreign commerce.

Draper, addressing the convention of the American Paper and Pulp association, said paper exports rose from a low of $18,000,000 in 1932 to $34,000,000 in 1936.

"This improvement has been greatly helped by concessions granted to the United States reciprocal trade agreements," he said.

"Canada gave reductions on books, advertising matter, paper roofing material, pulp board, wall paper and many other items. Our exports to Canada during the first six months of 1936 after the agreement became effective improved tremendously on some of the items listed."

Draper said Cuba granted im-

Special Guardian Says Quintuplets Virtually Millionaires; Maps Future

Toronto—(AP)—The Ontario government—like a father who sees his children growing up—planned a future "normal life" today for the Dionne quintuplets with their reunited family.

David A. Croll, welfare minister of the province, who has made the famous babes virtually millionaires in the two years he has been their special guardian, outlined the plans for their future yesterday in speaking on a bill to relieve him of his stewardship.

At present, Croll said, the five sisters are worth $543,046.39 in government bonds or government guaranteed securities, and in two more years will be worth $1,000,000. Contracts already signed will bring in $200,000 a year for the next two years, he said in explaining the Ontario government's desire to see Oliva and Elzira Dionne have more and more of a share in the life of their children.

"They have wealth, they have money," he said, "what they need most of all is a normal domestic life, association with their brothers and sisters, the love and discipline which their parents alone can completely provide."

"There is no substitute for a mother. Let them in these formative years have a little normality in their lives."

He said he hoped the parents would assume a larger responsibility for the education and religious training of the children who will be 3 years old May 28.

When he assumed the guardianship which he now seeks through legislation to turn over to the official provincial guardian, Percy D. Wilson, he said the children were worth $32,472.02 and some debts."

Now, Croll said, there is sufficient income "for the needs of the entire family for all time to come."

Croll's bill would only replace himself with Wilson. The other members of the board or guardians of the children are Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay, and Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, their doctor, would not be affected.

Writers' Project Uncovers Series of Badger Folk Tales

Milwaukee—(AP)—Charles E. Brown of Madison, state director of the federal writers' project, related last night some of the legendary folk tales uncovered in Wisconsin through the project.

The assistant superintendent of the state historical society spoke at a meeting of the Milwaukee County Historical society.

He recounted the legend of "Whisky Jack," the Paul Bunyan of the Wisconsin river lumbering days who "drank all the taverns dry from Wisconsin Rapids to the Mississippi and lifted rafts single handed over the sand bars."

He also revealed some of the state's legend lore mentioning stories of the "Fighting Fishes" of Dodge county who preyed on travelers in the Wisconsin territorial days, and the Lynches of the Ft. Atkinson and Lake Koshkonong district.

Plentiful early circus stores were found, he said, citing Delavan, Janesville, Whitewater, Evansville and later Baraboo as famous circus towns.

Divorce Is Granted To Milwaukee Woman

A divorce from Edward W. Essler, Appleton, was granted to Mrs. Bernice M. Essler, Milwaukee, on a counter claim in the municipal court of Judge Thomas H. Ryan Wednesday afternoon.

Reedsburg—(AP)—CCC enrollees stationed at the LaValle camp told today how they organized themselves into a maternity squad when an emergency case came to their door.
The young men were routed from bed early Sunday morning by the Rev. George Nafsinger, Bethel, who summoned help when his car stalled in a mud hole while he was taking his wife to a Reedsburg hospital.
When they reached the car they were greeted by the cries of a newly-born child, who had arrived while the father was seeking assistance.
The young men moved Mrs. Nafsinger and the baby to a camp truck and brought them to the hospital.

WE MUST SPEND TO SAVE

With musket, axe and axion, our forebears pushed into the wilderness across the Alleghenies. Poor Richard's Almanac was their court of last appeal. Poor Richard settled their arguments. He might, too, have spared us some problems had our grandfathers always remembered his teachings.

"Waste not; want not" was Poor Richard's counsel. Yet there was waste. Great areas were stripped of wealth through ruthless exploitation of natural resources. There was prodigious waste of coal and of lumber. Because our grandfathers did not always remember Poor Richard's counsel, their sins have returned to plague us.

There is comfort to be found in some axioms. We can say, as did our grandfathers, "There's no use crying over spilt milk." But it is not so simple as that. The milk is spilled, and we have to do something about it.

It is proposed that that something shall take the form of a long-term program of land and water control. The plan contemplates the expenditure of five billions of dollars over a six-year period. Again quoting the Almanac "Familiarity breeds contempt." We do not get excited, any longer, about appropriations of billions of dollars.

As our forebears were on the move, so also are there great migrations in this generation. In fact, the movement of Negroes from the Cotton Belt to northern industrial cities during the last twenty years is one of the greatest migrations of history. There are migrations of miners from the Appalachian region, of settlers from the cut-over lands of the timber belt, of farmers from the drought-battered Great Plains states.

We have been waging a losing war against Nature because we have violated Nature's laws. It is suggested that our plan of river control is basically wrong and that it accelerates the loss of precious top soil. The River Nile at flood, through the centuries, has been permitted to spread its silt over lush fields. Our great rivers, straining against man-made barriers, sweep top soil along to the Gulf. It would be better, some geologists claim, to move the cities or to surround them with impregnable walls, and to permit the rivers to spread out during flood periods.

Reporting to President Roosevelt his Great Plains Committee advises "the time has come to recognize frankly not only the great natural assets of the region but also its serious liabilities and to substitute intelligent adjustment to Nature to futile attempts to conquer her."

There must be intelligent adjustment and we may as well accept the fact that the expenditure of billions of dollars for the purpose cannot be avoided without inviting greater evils. The migrations of large population groups present new problems. The plight of those who remain on land that is unable to support them must be recognized.

Because our forebears took scant thought of our necessities, we face difficult problems. Our failure to make a beginning, at least, in the solving of our present problems can only mean that those who come after us will have little cause to call us blessed.

Poor Richard was fond of citing an other axiom: "Penny wise; pound foolish." It will be our own fault if we waste money on ill-considered reclamation plans. We will be equally foolish if we fail to do what we may to conserve the resources which are left to us and which are so vitally necessary to our future as a nation.

PUBLIC JOBS

When the English aristocracy "lost political privileges under the reform bills," writes Columnist Jay Franklin, all was not lost. Far from it. "The aristocracy of birth was converted into an aristocracy of brains."

This was done through the British public schools (we would call them private schools), which in effect became the training schools for the British civil service. That service, as the writer observes, "conquered and administered Kipling's empire, and is still the most distinguished cult of public service in the modern world." Thus England was saved from a social revolution and the "upper classes" from destruction, by making them useful and valuable to the nation.

We may be due for such a development in this country. It is evident that, from now on, there are going to be more openings in the government service than ever before. Already there is great need of young men and women of ideals and ability in public places. With an adequate civil service policy, and adequate preparation, there is no reason why our government should not be as well served in a decade or two as the British government is now. Our colleges, of course, should play a large part in this development, by giving good courses on economics, sociology, political science, public administration, and so on.

STRONG AND SMART

The New York Municipal Civil Service Commission has been so puzzled about the qualifications for firemen that it has finally announced a public hearing and invited to it officials of public and private schools, college professors, taxpayers' groups, organizations of civil service employees and others. The big problem seems to be: Do firemen need brains or brawn?

An ordinary human being who never served on a civil service commission would say, offhand, that firemen need both. So what?

The question came up just now because New York firemen are about to have depression salary cuts restored and to go on a three-platoon system, making the job of fire-fighter more attractive than it has been of late. The president of the commission holds that firemen should have at least high school training or its equivalent. Mental as well as physical tests should be strict.

Opponents of that idea regard brain and brawn as mutually exclusive. Experience does not bear them out. As a matter of fact, in the last examinations given to applicants for firemen's jobs, the men who made the highest grades in the brains part of the test were also in the best physical condition, and those least fit physically were lowest in mental standing.

Didn't somebody say something a long time ago about a sound mind in a sound body?

PACIFIST GOERING

General Hermann Goering, who commands the German armies, makes this unexpected statement in addressing a veterans' conference:

"I believe, my comrades, that most saber-rattling is done by the people who never wielded a saber. Men who have been at the front have learned to know the ghastly inferno of mechanized war, and want no more of it."

"I believe the World war was a final demonstration that nations cannot permit themselves again to stand against one another in such a conflict. It was the last warning of destiny to avoid the collapse of western civilization. A future war would surpass tremendously the terror of the one which is past."

Most of us have thought Goering and his master Hitler were the worst saber-rattlers in Europe, except possibly Mussolini. Hitler in particular has often seemed to be emulating the former Kaiser Wilhelm in waving a "shining sword" and shaking a "mailed fist." Possibly we have taken that too seriously.

If the Nazi government really wants peace, it should not be hard to get.

MEN AND WOMEN

"There will never be any really great women writers in the theater," opines playwright John Golden, "because women don't know as much as men." So that, we suppose, is that. And Mr. Golden is free to tell it because he is "not accepting social invitations" at present.

He goes ahead, though, and consoles women in this fashion: "It is woman's function to be charming and beautiful, and that's one of the many reasons why I say they don't know as much as men. They have no reason—it is enough that they are women."

He evidently thinks that's a nice compliment. But will he get away with it? Women who have charm and beauty usually think they have brains, too. And to tell the truth, men usually encourage them in that belief, by their flattering attentions.

And don't call the men hypocritical. The poor dub may be sincere about it. An infatuated man just naturally imagines that brains and knowledge go with beauty.

Opinions Of Others

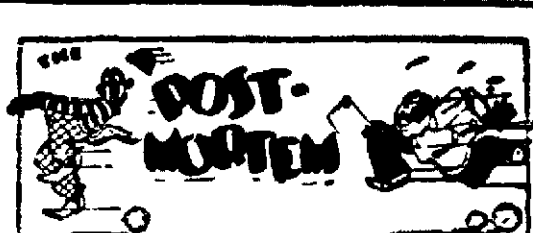

FOR TEACHERS AND PARENTS

"School teachers and parents are responsible for half of the cases sent to institutions for the insane," is the serious charge made recently by Dr. Luther Purdom, of the school of education of the University of Michigan. He emphasized the need of greater care in helping the child to adjust himself to his environment and to solve his personal problems.

The care and guidance of the so-called backward child, from Dr. Purdom's point of view, is a greater service to the community than handing prizes to easy victors. The talented youngster will help himself to what the schools have to offer.

But the handicapped child, the victim of physical or mental ailment or deficiency, or of unfortunate inheritances of other equally difficult kinds, too frequently is made to sense his defects more keenly by the prodding of teachers. The result may be a mental break-down resulting in insanity, or a moral collapse producing a criminal. Both are disastrous to the welfare of society.

These facts have not been sufficiently stressed in the training of teachers and they should be brought to the attention of parents by every possible agency.—Detroit News.

UP UNTIL press time yesterday, your correspondent had not located a dollar to use for Dollar Day, and chances were strong that he would not be able to lay his hands on one prior to store closing time . . . the good wife answered the call and came home to restore order to my chaos, but she neglected to bring back any dollars . . . I dunno why it is, but every time a dollar day comes around, I never have a dollar . . . I am going to write a letter to Congressman Schneider . . .

The next time an Englishman calls attention to American "rackets," I am going to point to the very fancy racketeering that characterizes the plans of Londoners to cash in on the coronation of George VI. An admittedly "poor" seat for the affair, which will permit no more than a fleeting glimpse of the procession, costs a mere $63.

This, of course, is just a sample, and you can estimate for yourself what a good seat will cost. Living expenses have been boosted sky high, naturally.

The payoff is the dwelling which advertises not only a good position from which to watch the coronation procession, but also a real ghost which walks the parlor at night.

Incidentally, the Italians are pretty sore about the coronation invitation from England to Emperor Haile Selassie.

According to the Italians, Haile Selassie is just another Ethiopian and as such has no right to be invited to the coronation. The emperor of Ethiopia, and I'll bet you'd forgotten too, is Victor Emmanuel III of Italy. Ask Mussolini.

"Five men," said Senator Minton of Indiana the other day, "on the court exercise more power than 435 congressmen. This awful power should not rest in the hands of any five men."

Tsk, tsk, senator, tsk, tsk.

You overlook the fact that one man in the White House exercises more power than 435 congressmen. Not to mention a large number of senators like Senator Minton who cheerfully jumps when FDR cracks the whip.

What about this "awful power resting in the hands of any one man? Wouldn't that be five times worse?"

But the senator could hardly be consistent and be a typical senator.

I like Westbrook Pegler's attitude on the matter because it agrees with what most of us have been thinking. Westbrook admits to not understanding all about the court packing but he is sure that it sounds suspicious.

The average man's principal worry now is: "How much longer can I get by on the coal that's left in the bin?"

A Verse for Today

THE PRETTIEST GIRL

The prettiest girl at the party
 Was the girl from the wrong side of town.
 Her hair was the color of copper;
 It lay on her head like a crown.
 Her eyes were as blue as the gentians;
 Her teeth were as even as pearls;
 Still the boys were a little too cordial
 To cover the snubs of the girls.

The prettiest girl at the party
 Left early, as often she did,
 And somehow the guests breathed more freely,
 Though one said: "Who gave her a bid?"
 The music played louder than ever,
 The dancing was swifter in pace,
 But a shadow fell over my evening
 When Beauty deserted the place.

The prettiest girl at the party
 Went home to the wrong side of town—
 A gem in an ugly work setting—
 And I wondered with half of a frown
 Just what Fate would do to the others,
 And which side of town would be right
 For the prettiest girl at the party
 May be tops twenty years from tonight!

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY M. D.

DENTOR PLUS VITE MINUS CRI

Let me say, writes a teacher in a dental school, that I am one dentist who doesn't mind your effort to change my professional title. While I cannot openly agitate for closing dental schools and sending all of our students over to the medical school for their instruction, I do think your contention has sound sense in it. Far from resenting your pipes at our branch of medicine, I advise my students they will do well to read your column regularly. I myself have been one of your followers for many years. I mean follower. I credit my excellent health to the practical hygiene I have learned from you. I think I have vite and I know I have escaped the cri by practicing the principles you prescribe. (—, D. D. S.)

Despite the disheartening fact that the professor's good will must be kept secret—a catch I find in some of the finest testimonials—I am delighted with his letter because of the way in which he uses the words dentor, vite and cri correctly and without apologetic quotation marks. Messrs. Merriam "please copy."

What worries the bootleg specialists who practice dentistry without a license to practice medicine is not so much their desire for the prestige of the title of doctor carries, but the knowledge that the present wasteful and inefficient system cannot go on much longer. For years the leaders in education have insisted that the present course of instruction in the dental school is practically the same as the course in the regular medical school, and they are right and that is as it should be. Then why maintain separate institutions? One school is enough to train any physician, no matter what specialty he elects to practice after he has finished his training and obtained a license. Time to arrange for whatever technical training his specialty may require, after he has finished his fundamental medical schooling. Every school year or semester the separate dental school continues to exist is wicked, extravagant waste—and I challenge educators, economists, and especially parents of cockers of boys or girls who hope to enter dentistry as a profession to defend the present system. This is the thought behind the title I would bestow upon the practitioner of dentistry—Dentor Jones, not Doctor Jones—though, mind, I concede D. D. S. (or D. M. M.) degree gives him the legal right to call himself Doctor Jones if he wishes, the same legal right the M. D. gives the physician to call himself Doctor Brown. But usage and popular welfare warrant restricting the professional use of the title Doctor to regular physicians in active practice. Anywhere at any time when one sees or hears the title used professionally it should be a sort of identification on which one might rely in an emergency. "Is there a doctor present?" means a doctor and no fooling. For public welfare the law should prohibit professional use of the title Doctor by any person not legally licensed to practice medicine and surgery.

Amending the Constitution
 Editor Post-Crescent—The Supreme court is a much debated question at present. A change in the court seems to be generally admitted as desirable. People differ on how it shall be done. An amendment to the constitution seems to me to be the best way to do it. The administration think it can not be done in this way and I think they are right. The ways of amending the constitution are too difficult, requiring months and even years to do it. It seems never to occur to people that we might amend the constitution by amending the constitution. The constitution gives two ways of amending it—the legislative and convention. Well, why not add a third way? Our constitution is a grand and noble foundation for a government. I do not think our government could have been established without it. It has stood the test for 150 years and today holds the honor of being the oldest unchanged government in the world. But still there is nothing sacred about it. While it holds our government together it is in spots open to change. It is not flexible enough to meet the fast changing conditions of present society. Advances in inventions and organizations have been so great of late years that our constitution is a positive hindrance to our progress. When it was drawn it fitted conditions admirably. It was a suit that fitted us nicely but we have grown so large that now it has become a strait jacket and binds us terribly in spots. This strait jacket is composed of many bands that surround us and every band covers some small group of people who profit by them yet to the country at large they are a positive menace. The supreme court has to protect these small selfish groups for they are guarded by the constitution which is out of date at these points. Every law passed by congress has to be so drawn as to avoid these strait jacket bands of the constitution. They often fail and the supreme court voids the law. This voidance always comes several years after the law has been passed and put to work. The consequences to the country are terrible. No other country in the world submits to it. And we should not submit to it either. Let me point out how we could amend it and still live under our constitution and still be under a constitutional government. Pass an amendment to the constitution giving a third way of amending it. It might read something like this: "The constitution is hereby amended giving the congress the power, by a two thirds vote of all the members elect, to amend any part of the constitution. Or to suspend any part of the constitution for any particular act of congress, as they see fit." With this amendment in the constitution and a law was desired that is prohibited the congress could change the constitution to permit it, or it could suspend the constitution for the proposed act. If a law was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, the congress could amend it and suspend the offending part of the constitution and re-pass the law. Such an amendment would not endanger our constitution for the amendments would be made by members of congress coming from every corner of our country. It would be as safe as our present great loss and humiliation. I believe it would be a safeguard against communism and fascism. A. W. Wolfe, 414 Union street, Feb. 25, 1937.

The past winter I have suffered from intense irritation and itching for hours after every bath. It is getting to a point where I contemplate giving up bathing! I wondered whether this might be due to improper diet. (Mrs. T. S. F.) Answer—No, it is more likely due to the desert dryness of your household atmosphere during the month of artificial heating. Your Birthday

"PISCES"

If February 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you this year are from 10:20 a. m. until 12:20 p. m., from 1:20 to 3:20 p. m. and from 7:20 to 9:20 p. m. and from 7:20 to 9:20 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:20 to 7:20 a. m., from 5:20 to 7:20 p. m. and from 10:20 p. m. until midnight.

Preconceived ideas are apt to prove to be wrong this day, particularly, if they involve anyone you have never met. Radical theories are not likely to meet with a kindly reception, this day, so it might be well not to express them. You may find the average person you meet this day in a very conservative frame of mind, so it might be well if you guide your conversation into safe channels. Most mistakes may be caused by people trying to hold a conversation while seeking information, or trying to do something else. The day should be full of agreeable surprises, the receiving of money unexpectedly being among the most pleasant. There are likely to be many cases of mistaken identity, due to hasty glances or the similarity of clothing. Most of the day's losses probably will be caused by putting things down hastily, so keep your mind on where you place your belongings. Married and engaged couples, and those who are convinced they have found the "one and only," they wish to marry, will have to be careful that by

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Don't always be satisfied with what you read in "The Congressional Record."

Take this, for instance: Senator Russell of Georgia introduced an amendment to the first deficiency bill designed to prohibit WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins from filling executive posts within a state by officials from other states. "In some of the states," explained Russell, "there has been an unreasonable policy on the part of the works progress administration. Oftentimes, at the expense of the government, they have sent people into state from other states to take many of the more attractive supervisory positions. I do not accept the implication that there is a state of this union which does not have within its borders citizens of sufficient integrity and ability to carry on."

Senator Barkley of Kentucky replied:

"I presume the object is to bar anybody, regardless of his qualifications or the need for his services, who may be brought in to a regional office from outside of the state in which the office is located. If that is the object of the amendment, I am opposed to it."

In Other Words

If Russell had said what the really was thinking, it would have been something like this: "The trouble is that Hopkins sent to Georgia a lot of social-minded case workers who didn't understand the relationship between the race, down there. Now you just can't go down to Georgia and treat black Jake Jones the same way you would white Peter Hawtry. It won't work, and anybody who thinks it will simply has no place in Georgia."

Also if Senator Barkley had really cut loose, he would have said something like this:

"Now, Dick, you know as well as I do that what you are all mad about is that Hugh B. Fleece from Kentucky was sent down to Atlanta as regional director of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and you thought that you ought to have gone to a Georgian. But pshaw, Dick Kentucky is in the same region as Georgia and he had as much right to the job as anybody."

Glass Moves

Now that B. of the way, it seems you ought to know that Senator Glass of Virginia has left the Raleigh Hotel where he lived for 25 years. He thought installation of a night club robbed the place of its dignity. Besides, he couldn't quiet the newshoys, street cars and fire sirens that held nightly carousels under his window. He moved over to the Mayflower where he amused himself nights trimming Jesse Jones, RFC administrator, at backgammon. But he doesn't feel at home there, particularly since Jones went to Miami for a holiday and his other backgammon antagonist, Admiral Cary Ebrayson, got so busy as Red Cross chairman that he couldn't play.

He may be back at the Raleigh after awhile. The hotel has offered him an apartment, high up and facing the inside of the block where he'll miss part of the street din, of which Washington has abundance.

From his old Raleigh apartment he could see the White House, right? But the senator has not at all times been inspired by a sight of the White House anyway.

If a woman and February 26 is your birthday, you were born under the most auspicious conditions for a promising future. You ought to be very versatile, and have the gift of a witty tongue. Your ability to adjust yourself to environment and people may be one of your greatest assets. You should be able to learn quickly anything you set your mind upon. Your greatest weakness may be facts, that are liable to cause you to waste a great amount of valuable time. Your likes and dislikes are perhaps very pronounced. It might be well to endeavor to conceal them at times. You ought to be a very successful professional dancer, hostess, entertainer, actress, interior decorator or restaurant manager. Some man might be capable of making you a very devoted husband, thus assuring your happiness.

The child born on February 26, usually, from the time it learns to talk, has the ability of expressing itself exceptionally well. It probably will be of a very sensitive disposition, its feelings easily hurt. Good advice regarding supersticiousness may do much to correct it.

If a man and February 26 is your natal day, you are most likely a good listener, a man of few words, but capable of making yourself clearly understood. As a merchant, banker, author, artist, sculptor, professional man or salesman you, in all likelihood, will make a name for yourself.

Fight Over Court Proposal Retards Work of Congress

Session Through Some Summer Months Now Regarded as Inevitable

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Outside of the national capital, the controversy that has arisen here over the supreme court may seem to be just another one of those Washington wars of words, but here it has become all-persuasive as an influence upon the whole legislative and political situation. Virtually no progress is being made toward the solution of the larger problems of the present day because, in one way or another, the supreme court issue touches every single one of them.

Thus, the president's splendid plan looking toward a reorganization of the executive branch of the federal government has been dealt a body blow by the furor that has arisen over reorganizing the judiciary. Likewise, no legislation to clarify the Wagner labor relations law so as to make it fair and effective is being brought forward because of a belief that, when the supreme court decides the pending cases, the whole labor problem will become wrapped up in the controversy over the size of the court.

Even the proposals for the recapture of the worthwhile things in the NRA, such as the establishment of better hours and working conditions under a system of voluntary cooperation in exchange for certain governmental privileges for the code groups or trade associations, seem to have been sidetracked.

See Summer Session
But worst of all, the bitterness being engendered by the dispute is making its way into every branch of the legislative branch of the government, and the movement of important bills toward final enactment is being retarded to such an extent that a congressional session through some of the summer months is regarded now as inevitable.

It is too early to say what the political consequences of the controversy will be, but, with a congressional campaign only eighteen months away, it is natural that members of both houses should be wondering what effect the votes they cast on the supreme court bill may have on their political future.

Politically, there is ammunition for a first rate issue in the present dispute. The Republicans have been cautiously avoiding any appearance of aggressive fighting, believing that it is better for the Democrats who disagree with the administration to appear in the front line trenches. But it is not to be forgotten that, once a number of members of congress find themselves breaking from the White House on one issue, they are not so timid about it the second time, especially if they see a favorable public opinion heading their way.

Few observers here believe Mr. Roosevelt will carry his fight against the supreme court to the point of breaking up his own party. Yet such a result is easily possible if the president does not move away from the fundamental question that he has raised—the power of the executive to readjust the judicial branch of the government.

Need Industrial Peace
Meanwhile, there is growing evidence of a serious economic situation. The "sit-down" strikers are causing an increase in the interruptions of the recovery march. The situation cries out for some public policy that will meet the legitimate demands of organized labor without breaking down the productive processes of the country. Because of Mr. Roosevelt's political preeminence, the local authorities everywhere seem to be looking to him for leadership. The Wagner labor relations law was supposed to deal with problems of this kind. Yet no move is being made to amend the law so as to bring industrial peace. It has often been said that liberals are precipitate and hasty when they get into power, and the latter usually answer that, because they stay in power for such brief periods before the reaction comes, they must necessarily make haste.

Plenty of Sound Plans
But there are plenty of sound policies which might have advanced the cause of liberalism at this session of congress had it not been for the intersection of the supreme court controversy. Congress was getting ready to consider at last a broader and more practical definition of interstate commerce, and while the O'Mahoney bill to license corporations may be too far reaching, there are desirable objectives in it from the viewpoint of proper federal regulation of enterprises which operate across state lines. It, too, is side-tracked.

What seems to have been overlooked is that, even granting the premise that capitalism must be modified, the existence of a system that has taken root in centuries of time and habit makes it difficult to change by a sudden surgical operation the very arteries of its body.

Nor is the answer to be found in a large number of amendments to the federal constitution. There are plenty of liberal laws that can be written within the constitution, and laws that would be upheld by the present supreme court. The ingenuity of the draftsmen has by no means been exhausted by a single attempt in each field; also the New Deal has a better knowledge of the points in its own program than it had four years ago.

All government is a process of gradual adjustment of viewpoints, but the break-up through the court fight of an era of good feeling such as began with the last election has impeded the processes of adjustment. In that respect, the supreme court controversy has done much harm, though, to be sure, in awakening an interest in the meaning of the constitution and the method of its interpretation, tangible benefits to the cause of constitutional government may be foreseen irrespective of the outcome of the present effort to increase the size of the supreme court.

The WORLD of STAMPS

BY QUINTON JAMES

Although only half a square mile in area, Vatican City, since 1929 an independent state, has its own postage stamps.

In that time it has issued quite a number of interesting designs, two of which concentrated upon the portrait of Pope Pius XI. The most recent was the horizontal rectangular format in the issue of 1933.

On four of the higher values, from 1 to 2.75-lire, the head of the Pope is placed in a central medallion printed in black and surrounded by a highly decorative frame in varying colors.

Previously the Pope appeared on the first issue of 1929, again on the higher values, 80-centesimi to 10-lire. These stamps were smaller than the later issue, about the size of a U. S. 2-cent. The 1933 stamps were approximately the measurement of a U. S. special delivery.

In addition, the Pope's portrait also was used on the two values of the first special deliveries of 1929, it being placed to the left with the inscription taking up the other half of the stamp. When a new special delivery issue appeared in 1933, it displayed an aerial view of Vatican City.

As the total of all types of Vatican stamps issued so far is 83, it is a rather easy country to collect. Besides, none has a catalog rating above $2.70, used or unused.

The regular postal issues now total 34. There are four special deliveries as well as four semi-postals, the Holy year issue of 1933. In addition, the overprint was used in 1931 to create 15 parcel posts and 6 postage dues.

The latest catalogued Vatican set appeared last year to commemorate the Catholic press conference. Made up of eight values, it had designs depicting doves and a bell, an allegory of the church and the Bible, a portrait of St. John of Bosco and another of St. Francis of Sales.

A change in the rates on foreign letters has caused Finland to make some stamp shifts. The increase was from 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 marks. So, a new 3 1/2 mark denomination has been added. It is in deep blue of the type of 1930 bearing the coat of arms. At the same time the color of the 2-mark was changed from deep violet to scarlet.

France's list of commemorative stamps is being augmented again. This time the tribute is paid to Pierre Corneille (1606-1684), the French dramatist and poet.

The occasion is the tri-centenary of the production of "Le Cid." Corneille's great drama based on the legendary hero of Spain. The stamp, 15-centime face value, bears a large portrait of Corneille. Masks, books, pen and ink—symbols of his contribution to literature and the theater—also are part of the design.

"Le Cid" had a triumphant success. It roused a storm of controversy among French writers of that period, drew the jealousy of Richelieu and the Academy and started a pamphlet war. But the public liked "Le Cid." It is considered the most "epoch-making" play in French literature.

BIRTHDAY CAKE AT EASTERN STAR PARTY

A huge five-tiered cake, glowing with the light of forty candles, was the center of attention at the banquet which celebrated the fortieth anniversary of Fidelity chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Wednesday night at the Masonic temple. Here Mrs. John Wells, worthy matron of the chapter, is handing the knife with which to cut the cake to Miss Ada Myers, right, the only charter member present. Eastern Star Observes Its Fortieth Anniversary, 350 People Attend Celebration

ABOUT 350 persons, including over 100 visitors from Brillion, Oshkosh, Winneconne, Menasha, Kaukauna, Manitowoc and other cities, attended the dinner and program which was given Wednesday night at the Masonic temple in celebration of the fortieth anniversary of Fidelity chapter, Order of Eastern Star. The chapter was organized here in 1897.

James B. Wagg gave the toast to the chapter, after which Miss Ada Myers, the only charter member, presented the birthday cake. She cut it only figuratively, however, for it was made of frosted wood, but beneath its large tiers were very edible cup cakes, frosted in the order's five different star colors.

During the chapter meeting, nine of the sixteen persons still living who have been members of the order 35 years or more were honored. They were Miss Ada Myers, Mrs. Louisa Shepard Galpin, Mrs. Sue Rose Lesselyoung, Mrs. Mathilda Wildhagen, Miss Laura Fischer, Mrs. Ida Fischer Goodrich, Mrs. Margaret Hoefer Brooks, Mrs. Fannie L. Marshall and Dr. Victor F. Marshall.

After Miss Myers brought a greeting from the charter members, the past matrons and past patrons presented a ceremony which had been arranged by Miss Elsie Koppin. Mrs. Fred Poppe then read the anniversary poem which she had written in honor of the occasion.

Following the chapter program, a varied entertainment was presented. It included instrumental music by the high school ensemble, who played "Serenade" by Mozart, "Cannonade" by Weilsby, and "Gavotte Antique" by Zamecnik. A Lawrence college theater group presented a skit: Mrs. Florence Roate Krabbe sang; and George Nixon led group singing of old-time songs.

The special music had been arranged by Miss Frieda Koppin, and the programs had been made by Mrs. Myra Hagen, Mrs. Harry Marshall was dining room chairman, and Miss Lynda Hollenbeck was in charge of table decorations.

When the chapter has its next meeting, on March 10, Mrs. Florence Liesman, Lake Mills, grand worthy matron of Wisconsin, will be here for inspection.

Opening Two Bids With Part Score Are Forcing

(Copyright, 1937, By Ely Culbertson)
"Dear Mr. Culbertson: Occupying the kibitzer position back of the South hand recently I saw a hand that was so bid as nearly to wreck said kibitzer. I am submitting the hand as, frankly, I can't be quite certain just how the South and North hands should be handled and how the asking bids should be used in order to arrive at the proper contract. I water eleven spades or six diamonds is a lay-down. The hands were as follows: East dealer.
North - South vulnerable; part-score 30.

A 6
K 7 5
WEST
J 5 4
8 5 4 2
K 6 4 3
EAST
K Q J 10 9 7 5 4
SOUTH
A Q J 10 9
A Q J 10

East opened the bidding with a preempt of three hearts. South doubled. West passed. North bid three spades. East passed. South bid four diamonds, which concluded the bidding. May I mention here that the kibitzer fell out of his chair at the four diamond bid.

"Feeling that, considering the part-score, the East opening bid was correct (although I feel it should have been four hearts had there been no part-score) I would like to know whether the South declaration should have been doubled or four hearts, and whether North's spades should not have been four spades rather than three. Of course there can be no question as to North's error in permitting the bidding to stop with four diamonds, or as to South's error in bidding four diamonds over the three spade response.

"All in all, it turned out to be considerable of a mess, and the afore-said kibitzer requires a little backing up as his comments on the bidding of the hand were not enthusiastically received.

"Yours very truly,
"C. C. C."
As one of the most indefatigable kibitzers in the country I sympathize heartily with C. C. C. for the agony he suffered in his official position during this hand. Incidentally I always have felt that kibitzers' chairs should have safety belts as la airplanes as protection against lat spinning bids.

With a hand as powerful as South's four hearts over three hearts would have been preferable to a take-out double. North needs so little to insure a game and indeed, a slam, that South should make the strongest bid at his command. But even with the double the partnership should have had no difficulty in reaching at least six odd. North underbid terribly in answering the double with only three spades. To begin with, the double of one major suit, particularly at the three level, had begged for the other major, and here was North able to oblige with a six card suit and an outside ace and king. Four spades was obviously the correct response. Over that South should leap to six and then North would have a real decision to make as to whether to rest or go on. All in all I feel that a pass to six spades would be the better course, even though, on the cards actually held and with the spades breaking 3-1, the grand slam was a lay-down.

Despite South's two injudicious calls, however, it was North's fault that the fanal contract was a shameful four diamonds. Certainly North might have taken his courage by the ears, closed his eyes, and made a desperate leap to four spades!

TODAY'S QUESTION
Question: Is an opening two bid, when having a part-score, forcing when it is enough for game?

Answer: Opening two bids with part-score are forcing for at least one round even when enough for game. If the responder makes a positive response (raise, suit take-out, or jump to three no trump) opener must rebid at least once. If responder makes a negative two no trump response, the opener may pass. If the opener rebids in any new suit it is again forcing for one round, and thereafter, when either partner bids a new suit, it is forcing for one round. If either partner rebids in no trump or in a suit already bid it is not forcing.

My Neighbor Says—

Never try to hurry or force raising of dough when making bread, or, on the other hand, do not allow it to stand too long between kneadings or do not add more flour during kneading than absolutely necessary. Keep dough soft.

To clean wicker furniture brush thoroughly to remove all possible dust. Remove cushions, if possible, if not cover carefully. Place the pieces to be cleaned on several thicknesses of newspaper so that splashing may be freely indulged in. With soft brush dipped in warm white soapsuds go over the entire surface, working into the cracks and crevices. Work quickly and do not allow the wicker to become soaked through. Rinse by dipping the brush in clear warm water. When thoroughly dry, polish with a soft cloth dipped in a very little oil or wax.

When Flood Waters Rise

III—FLOOD CONTROL
People living alongside the Mississippi river have placed great trust in their levees. They know these walls of earth sometimes give way under flood pressure, but they have not found better protection.

A "sand boll" behind a levee

Whatever we may think of the value of levees, it is plain that they do not answer the whole flood problem. They sometimes help save people between Cairo, Ill., and the Gulf of Mexico, but they do nothing to keep flood waters from rising in the first place. Millions of dollars have been spent in flood control, a great deal of it on levees, but there is much work to do. Experts have studied plans of many kinds, and they do not all agree on the best ways to stop disaster before it happens.

One plan is known as "reforestation." In many sections the land is now bare where once grew forests. The cutting of trees and the clearing of underbrush have taken away a certain "brake" on the flow of water. Trees planted around the headwaters of rivers would give nature a better chance to hold back the flow of rain water and melting snow. Reforestation has been carried on to some extent, but there may be a great deal more of it in the future.

Perhaps something can be gained by thinking back over the history of our continent. Thousands and thousands of years ago, great glaciers spread over large sections of North America. The glaciers "dumped" boulders, gravel and other debris in thousands of places, often damming rivers and causing lakes to form. Glacier-made lakes are common in Canada and in some northerly parts of the United States.

As we look back over history, we find that most important floods on our continent have taken place in regions which have few, if any, glacier-made lakes. Does this mean anything?

Nearly all lakes are broad parts of rivers. We may say they are river-flooded regions which have kept their water. Rivers flow into them and out of them again. The outflowing river sometimes has a different name than the inflowing, but in a sense it is really the same river in many cases.

When a river at high water flows into a good-sized lake, it raises the level of the lake, but cannot suddenly raise it a great deal. In this way floods are halted which might lake place if the river did not have to flow through the lake.

In the past certain rivers have been dammed in order to make artificial lakes, and some engineers believe this will prove the best way to settle the flood problem. Even a great river in flood would be slowed down if it had to flow through several lakes.

Adjustment Is Big Word—But Boys Usually Manage

BY ANGELO PATRI
"What does the teacher mean by adjustment? She says I need to make some adjustment of myself if I want to get along here, and I don't know what she means. I looked in the dictionary, but I can't see what the definition has to do with me getting a poor mark in social behavior, and the rest."

"What does it say?"
"It says here: 'To bring to a satisfactory state where parties are agreed.' It gets me."

"Maybe I can help. You pushed Dan on the stairs today and he punched you and you were reported. Yesterday you stayed behind the class and got to the science room late and interrupted the teacher. Not so long ago you left the glove home so the team had to send after it. You knew you ought to have handed it in at the close of the game, not taken it home. When the team went to the game in the bus you said you were taking the shortcut, and you were late and a substitute took your place. These are the things that made the teacher tell you that you needed to come to some agreement with yourself that would make your conduct satisfactory to other people, teachers included."

"You mean I wasn't doing anything to anybody. Honest. I was doing all right. They only just thought—"

"Couldn't you punne off a little of your desire to do as you like no matter who dislikes it? I mean, couldn't you take it easy going down stairs and not shove? That would be bringing about a more satisfactory state, and I'm certain Dan would agree with you."

"Oh, well, yeah. Yes sir, I may be could. But he is so slow."

"You have to adjust yourself to his slowness because you both have to use those stairs with a couple of hundred other boys."

"Yes, I know. But anyway—"

"Couldn't you trim down your notion about doing as you please

Reducing Should be Scientific

BY ELSIE PIERCE
MOST physicians have histories of cases of harmful reduction. Some women very unwisely take drugs, either because the drugs benefited someone else they know or because such drugs are unscrupulously advertised as quick ways to reduce. The very first rule of safe and sane reducing is careful diagnosis by a physician. If yours is the type of superfluous flesh that needs treatment via drugs, let your own doctor discover that and advise you. Your own case may be so different from Mrs. X's that her treatment may be very harmful to you, although it is working wonders for her.

The safest, sanest method of reducing is via diet and exercise. Exercise is excellent for the majority of people and is not harmful to the average person. Of course, if one is in poor health, if there is a heart or lung condition, then a physician should be consulted. He may permit very light exercise, but nothing drastic.

Diet, if it is slow, sane and safe not only effects a permanent reduction, but by slowly shrinking the stomach cuts down on the desire for food intake. For the most part people who are overweight can easily afford to cut down on a little food each meal without any serious consequences. They can also afford to cut out excess sweets, starches, candy and rich desserts. It's the fats and carbohydrates that pile the pounds on.

The most sensible diets are those that preserve all five important food elements in proper proportion. I don't believe it is wise to cut out sweets and starches completely.

In the last decade many food fads and freak diets have taken root. But I do think women are becoming more and more sensible, the matter of reducing diets.

There are mono diets which not only become very monotonous but fail to give the system important food elements. There's the "half pint" diet (taking half a portion of the usual diet) which might prove far too drastic at first and might fail to cut down sufficiently on the fat-producing elements.

Balanced Diet
The sanest diet of all is the balanced diet, which gives the body enough calories for the amount of energy the particular body expends which includes the necessary proportions of the necessary food elements, which effects reduction slowly and sanely but nevertheless very surely.

My complete new booklet "Reduce by Diet" (Booklet 201) is yours for ten cents. It covers the subject thoroughly. Send for it, giving your name and full address to The Bell Library c/o this newspaper, 247 West 43rd street, New York, N. Y.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

BY EMILY POST

EXPLAINING THE TERM "GUEST OF HONOR"

Dear Mrs. Post: Is the so-called guest of honor in every case the person for whom the party has been especially given? I hadn't thought so and sent in an account of her party for a friend to the society reporter of a publication, mentioning that Mrs. Older was the guest of honor. The account appears in print that the party was a satisfactory state where parties are agreed. Try it.

"I guess I'll have to. Thanks a lot. I couldn't even spell the word. Thought it meant something, but I didn't know what I guess I can make some. Thanks again."

It is a big word for boys to swallow, but they usually manage.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the use and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Approves Marriage for Prudent Elderly Persons

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman of 51. Have never been married. Now I have a proposal from a widower who is twenty years older than I am. His children are all married so they would be no problem. He is a well-to-do man of culture, refinement and education. The only thing against him is his age, yet he is very active mentally and physically, in excellent health and could easily pass for a man of 35 or 40. As nearly as I can analyze my feelings toward him, they are a combination of respect, admiration and a desire for security, coupled with a dash of romance. I do not have to marry because I have a good job and can support myself, but I feel the need of companionship. Do you think such a marriage would be reasonably happy? M. J. B.

Answer:
Why not? Every marriage is more or less of a gamble, but age takes no more risk when it enters the holy estate than youth does. In fact, the odds are in favor of age because years of living and experience in dealing with people have taught the mature man and woman self-control, the technique of getting along with others and not to expect perfection in mere human beings that the boy and girl lack.

I am strong for elderly people marrying when they pick their mates with reasonable prudence. Of course, when an old man marries a flapper, or an old woman buys a boy husband, it is bound to end in disaster because the two have nothing in common. They belong to different generations and that makes a gulf between them that nothing can bridge.

But it is a different matter when a man and woman belong to the same age class. They have the same background. They can say to each other, "Do you remember?" They have the same traditions, tastes and habits and want to do the same things. And that gives them a basis upon which to establish a marriage that has every prospect of success unless, of course, they have personal idiosyncracies that would have made them a bad matrimonial choice even when they were 20.

Old people are very lonely if they have no husbands or wives. Living with their children does not satisfy them, no matter how kind and good their children are to them. They want their own homes in which they and their wives belong to the same age class. They are pleased, not to feel that they are perpetual guests in another's house.

They want their mates to sit by the hearth with them of an evening and enjoy it. They don't want to feel that their children are sacrificing themselves to stay at home with Father or Mother.

And it is because the old need companionship when they can no longer do much for themselves that a considerable size, meaning one hundred and fifty guests, I would like to give this for a friend who is leaving to be married in a foreign country and will probably not return for a long while. I decided to make this a shower because it will be the only party to which every one can be invited, since she is having no wedding here and people are not likely otherwise to send her wedding presents.

Answer: Frankly, I don't know how an invitation to a shower can be formally worded since a third person invitation is utterly unsuitable for an intimate party, and on the other hand, an informal second person invitation seems out of key, since it is very hard to suppose that a bride would have as many as one hundred fifty friends who care for her enough to be asked to bring a shower present. If she really has this many intimate friends, then write on your visiting card, "Shower for Mary Brown," followed by day and hour.

Washington Program Is Given by Masonic Lodge

New London—Sixty men and women of New London and vicinity attended a Washington party at the Masonic temple Tuesday evening. The party was given by men of the New London Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, for their wives, members of the chapter of Royal Arch Masons and their wives, and members of the Order of Eastern Star and their husbands.

Mayor E. W. Wendlandt spoke briefly on George Washington. The feature of the entertainment was a skit, "The Spirit of '76", portrayed by a group of men from Hortonville and Dale. Joe Birmingham, 64, of Hortonville, played the same flute he claims he played when Wisconsin boys left for service in the Civil war.

There were comedy sketches by "Tony" Budwit and games and contests. There was dancing after the lunch. Monroe Manley, Shiocton, acted as master of ceremonies at the party.

The committee responsible for the event consisted of F. E. Patchen, general chairman, Bert Haskell, Dr. E. Lyons, C. D. Feathers, E. N. Calf, Dr. T. M. Clemmons, William Viel, Charles Abrams, Fred Stratton of Hortonville and John Bottenseck of Medina.

Improving Trucker Team Is Threat to Staceymen

New London—Friday the New London High school cagers travel to Clintonville to test the mettle of the improving trucker team. In two recent games with Kaukauna the Clintonville squad nearly defeated the Littlemen each time. New London's showing has been rather erratic in conference games and anything may happen. The truckers have yet to win their first game.

Coach Delbert Stacy has been working on the general morale of the team the past two weeks in an effort to get the five clicking again. Ned Demming, star guard, has seen little practice the past week. Last night in a practice scrimmage game with the Shiocton High school team the squad unofficially set up a 54 to 9 score.

The reserve squad will take the bus to Clintonville to play a preliminary with the Clintonville B's prior to the regular game.

Neenah Chapter Of Disabled Vets Is Formed at Meet

Hear Address by William J. Dodd, National Representative

Neenah — About 20 disabled World War veterans met in the city hall last evening to form a local chapter of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and to hear an address by William J. Dodd, Jersey City, N. J., national representative of the organization.

An application for a charter was signed by more than the minimum required number and John A. Kuehler, temporary commander, was appointed to secure additional charter members until the time of the next meeting, scheduled for 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, March 24, at which time it is expected that charter applications will be closed and the first set of officers will be elected.

Deceptive Propaganda
Mr. Dodd declared that the "so-called Economy bill of March 30, 1933, which drastically reduced the compensation or pension of every veteran in this community and at the same time materially increased the burden of the county, was preceded by a great volume of clever, deceptive propaganda, inspired by the National Economy league and other 'budgetary economists,' through the use of over-emphasis of the very few veterans who were being generously compensated.

The under-emphasis of the great number of veterans who were unemployed and under-compensated was evident and trick charts were presented showing statistics designed to lead to a false conclusion. The charts showed that all governmental expenditures had increased 300 per cent the last 15 years with the inference that this was caused by the increasing cost of veterans' benefits whereas in fact this increase in governmental taxes was chargeable to local cities, counties and states, while the federal expenditures, from which come all veteran benefits, actually decreased."

Become Discouraged
Mr. Dodd pointed out that "because of inexperience with technicalities, many disabled men in this community are not receiving the amount of compensation which a generous people intended for them. Others have become discouraged in the further prosecution of their claims, baffled because of the death or disappearance or lack of detailed memory of former buddies, associates and doctors, who might otherwise have helped to establish their claims.

The D. A. V. proposes to continue its fight for complete restoration of the compensation rights in effect prior to the Economy bill and will continue its legislative, rehabilitation and preferential employment programs on behalf of the war-time disabled until complete legal justice has been given to every man with an equitable claim, according to Mr. Dodd. Local eligibles were urged to contact Mr. Kuehler if they desire to become charter members of the chapter.

Club Members Opposed to Plans for Change in Court

Menasha—Out of 50 members contacted in the Menasha Economic club membership of 71, 38 expressed definite disapproval of the proposed changes in the United States Supreme Court, 4 expressed approval, 3 were neutral and 5 were in favor of the changes with reservations according to a report from Mrs. Norbert Verbrick, president of the club, following a telephone vote to determine the club members' stand. The vote was taken following a request from the Wisconsin Federated Women's Club officers who are polling the entire club membership throughout the state and nation.

The three neutral members stated that they did not believe they possessed enough information about the change at the present time to express an opinion. One member said that the change has been attempted ever since the time of George Washington. Perhaps there is a reason why there should be a change and perhaps there is another reason why the change has never come about was another contention who also stated that she did not possess factual information on the pros and cons sufficient to make a definite decision.

Those members who voted in favor of the change with reservations were questioning whether the change would set a dangerous precedent. They believe that while it might be alright under the present administration, the men who follow may use it to their advantage and the country's disadvantage.

The 21 members who could not be contacted were either out of the city or ill.

TREAT A COLD AS IF YOU MEAN IT!

Don't Fool Around with Half-way Measures and Invite Serious Complications!

One of the worst things you can do is "kick around" with a cold. The so-called "common cold" causes more serious sickness and more enforced absence from work than anything else.

It's a mistake to treat a cold lightly. A cold calls for a cold treatment and not a "cure-all". A cold calls for internal treatment, for a cold is an internal infection.

One of the best things you can take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Your own doctor will tell you that.

First of all, Bromo Quinine is a cold tablet, made expressly for the treatment of colds.

Secondly it is internal medication and of fourfold effect.

Here's what it does:

First, it opens the bowels, an advisable step in treating a cold.

Second, it checks the infection in the system.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Bromo Quinine tablets now come sugar-coated as well as plain. The sugar-coated are exactly the same as the regular, except that the tablets are coated with sugar for palatability.

Play safe in your treatment of a cold! The moment you feel the first symptom, go right to your druggist for a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

Start taking the tablets immediately, two every four hours. That action will usually break up a cold in 24 hours.

Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. Ask the druggist for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and insist upon getting what you ask for!

The few pennies' cost may save you a lot in medical bills.

Braddock Plans to Toss Lots of Blows at Louis

BY SCOTTY RESTON (Punch-Hitting For Eddie Brie)

NEW YORK—Joe Louis, struck once, flames like a match, but Champion Jimmy Braddock plans to burn him fast.

"I'll be hitting from the first half," Jimmy says, and sure as gray hair and coffin nails, that'll start a ruckus. Got a complaint in the mail from a gent who says he couldn't understand Joe Gould's Brooklynese over the radio at the Braddock-Louis signing.

... We don't want to get into the argument between Pittsburgh's Jack Sutherland and Harrison, but for personal reasons we'd like to point out that here's one case where a Scotchman is on record as digging into his own jeans to give the boys a little "fun money."

New York State Athletic commissioner Bill Brown was asked yesterday if Max Baer's hands were examined and okay before the Baer-Louis bout. Replied the commissioner: They were examined all right, but we don't know whether they were okay because he didn't use them against Louis.

During this same commission meeting, it was recalled that Brown had described Baer as "a bum." We looked up this up in the biggest dictionary we could find, and we've been wondering ever since if Brown could have meant that Baer is (1) a humming noise, or (2) a high-popped, two-masted craft of the levant. ... Either way it's pretty bad. ... Brown and Baer have clashed before. ... You may remember Brown as the gent who was going to stop the Baer-Primo Carrera fight because he said Baer wasn't in condition. ... Baer knocked Carrera down 11 times, and it was freely suggested after the bout that the doctors examine Brown instead of De Preem.

Concordia tipped Carroll 35-29 in the opening game of the season at Milwaukee, and the Pioneers fear that the improved Lutherans may have just as much stuff when they come out to Waukesha to play. Lawrence, who was plays here Tuesday, also was one of the five teams to defeat Carroll away from home this season, and the Lampmen expect to be hard-pressed.

Carroll Prepares for 4 Hard Cage Battles
Waukesha—Carroll marches into the home stretch of its basketball season Friday night when the Pioneers meet Concordia on the Waukesha floor. Following this engagement will come the final week of the season congested with three slat contests. The Orange goes to Lake Forest on Monday night, returns to meet Lawrence here on Tuesday, and travels to Ripon on Friday, March 5, for the final game of the year.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
New London at Clintonville.
Neenah at Menasha.
Kaukauna at Shawano.

KAUKAUNA High school basketball team, which handed Shawano High school one of its two defeats this season, will invade the Indian camp Friday night in the feature game of the Western division of the Little Nine conference. A win for the Indians will improve their lead over West DePere to a full game. West DePere is idle this week while the rest of the circuit catches up in the number of games played.

In the first Shawano-Kaukauna meeting at Kaukauna, the Electric City aggregation copped 28 to 20 by stalling away the last four or five minutes. Previous to that it had gotten a slight lead on Shawano and then controlled the ball which left the Indians powerless to do much.

The other feature game of the week will bring together Neenah and Menasha at Menasha. Besides the natural rivalry between the clubs there is the memory of a Menasha victory several weeks ago by a point or two which Neenah will attempt to erase. And added to that, the Bluejays top Neenah in the standings which the Red Rockets don't like one bit.

The Menashians still had the use of Wideman, star guard, when they pumped Neenah in January which was another angle of the contest which the Rockets would like to avenge.

In the other conference contest New London will invade Clintonville and should hang up a victory over the luckless truckers, who haven't won a single conference game.

Sutherland and Pitt End Quarrel

Head Football Coach Returns From "Good Will" Tour

Pittsburgh (P)—Dr. John Bain (Jack) Sutherland, Pitt's head coach of football, came back from "good will" tour today to hear that his clash with university athletic authorities "is closed" as far as school officials are concerned.

Pitt athletes, alumni and student leaders, alarmed over the rift between the veteran coach and W. Don Harrison, athletic director, already had rallied to Sutherland's support for a "showdown" they believed was coming.

But, Chancellor John G. Bowman, a few hours before Sutherland's return from a two-day trip to New York, stepped in as peacemaker and flatly announced that until more facts come directly to the athletic council, the matter, so far as the university is concerned, "is closed."

Admitting that he was "disturbed" by rumors Sutherland might resign, he declared Harrison always had "shown" his appreciation of Sutherland and that "on the other hand," Sutherland had not made any complaint to the athletic council or to the university concerning lack of cooperation.

Sutherland said the disagreement between him and Harrison developed "after the Rose Bowl game New Year's day when I gave the players some spending money."

Bowling Outside Of Milwaukee Has Shown Big Increase

Madison (P)—E. G. Scheller, accountant for the trade practice commission, testified at public hearing yesterday that business of Wisconsin bowling alleys, outside the city of Milwaukee, has increased 25 per cent since 1935.

He presented figures to Carl J. Marsh, commission counsel, who is seeking to establish reasonable costs of the bowling industry to be used in setting up trade practice standards.

In 1935, Scheller said, the operators lost $20.06 per alley, but in the last four months of 1936 they made a profit of $32.40 on each alley.

"This increased business lowered the reasonable costs of bowling per alley from the 1935 figure of 16 cents to 15 cents," he added.

Surveys of Sheboygan and La Crosse showed that bowling is more popular there than in any other cities of the state outside of Milwaukee, Scheller declared. He also noted that players demanded a higher standard of equipment and operators spent more money for advertising as interest in the sport increased.

Badger Mitt Team Leaves for East

Penn State Squad Has Won Five Straight Matches This Year

Madison (P)—Coach Johnny Walsh's boxing team will leave Madison this afternoon for State College, Pa., where they have an engagement not altogether to their liking with the Nittany Lions Saturday night.

The Badgers, who won from North Dakota University 64 to 13 in their first match last weekend, have a wholesome respect for the Penn State fighters' record, but Penn State's record this week that they are in shape.

Squad members chosen to make the trip include Captain George Stupar, Art Walsh, Jim Walsh, Sid Hurwitz, Gordon Herman, Vito Schwarz, Truman Torgerson and Verne Woodward.

Wisconsin and Minnesota track teams will meet here Saturday afternoon. The basketball team plays Minnesota at Minneapolis Saturday night.

Braddock Willing To Meet Schmeling After Louis Fight

Champion Bored by Lawyer's Actions in Heavyweight Go

BY ALAN GOULD
NEW YORK (P)—It will be quite all right with James J. Braddock when the lawyers retire from the heavyweight ring, pull the zippers on their briefcases and permit him to concentrate on the job of putting his heavyweight title back in circulation.

James J. says he is not only bored by nearly two years of inactivity and all the legal palaver, but as a husband and a father, is more than anxious to feather the nest that was worn a trifle bare before he shocked the fists experts by whipping the magnolia man, Max Baer.

Braddock wants to fight not once, but twice this year. That, how content he is of his chances of beating Joe Louis, the first Negro to get a shot at the heavyweight crown since Jack Johnson.

If and when he beats Louis, and collects, he hopes, the better part of $500,000 for his share of the Chicago fight profits, Braddock wants to take on Max Schmeling, to remove any question about who's who in the heavyweight industry.

"Louis, regardless of the outcome of their fight last year, figures to be tougher than Schmeling," says Braddock. "Joe has a knockout punch in either hand while Max has nothing dangerous but that right. A smart boxer is not going to be nailed by that right the way Louis was. Most fights are won or lost because of mistakes in the ring. Louis made too many mistakes against Schmeling."

What about the effects of two years' inactivity on his legs and all-around ringwork?

"I don't believe I'll be rusty," replied Braddock. "I didn't get going until pretty late in my ring career. When I started my comeback more than two years ago I wasn't handicapped by lack of ring activity. I have always kept myself in good condition. My hands are all right now. I'm not more than a half dozen pounds over-weight, and my legs are as strong as ever."

Lawrence Squash Players Compete for Minor Letters

COMPETITION among students at Lawrence college for letters in squash racquets, recently made a minor sport, is constantly becoming keener. Squash courts at Lawrence, one of two Midwestern colleges so equipped, are in constant use by students, faculty members, and alumni, all of whom have apparently lost their minds over the game.

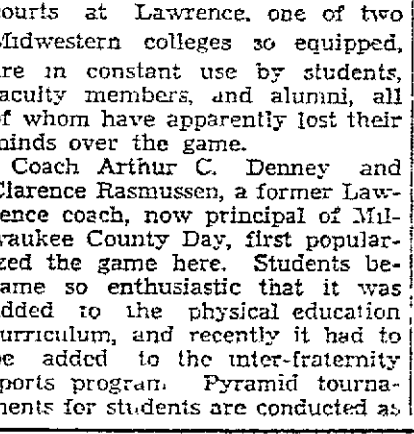

Coach Arthur C. Denney and Clarence Rasmussen, a former Lawrence coach, now principal of Milwaukee County Day, first popularized the game here. Students became so enthusiastic that it was added to the physical education curriculum, and recently it had to be added to the inter-fraternity sports program. Pyramid tournaments for students are conducted as well as matches between faculty and student teams.

The demand for courts at Alexander gymnasium has become so great that the college is considering adding two more. In addition to the students, a number of alumni help keep the courts in use. Among the better players are Thomas N. Barrows and John S. Mills, president and dean of the college, and Professors Alden Megraw, of the art department, and Troyer and Clippinger of the English department.

The Viking varsity squash team now meets the Town and University clubs of Milwaukee, Green Bay, Carleton college, and Purdue University. It is the only Midwest conference squad represented in the Western Intercollegiate squash tournament.

Baer Refused License To Fight Bob Pastor

New York (P)—The latest heavy-weight fiasco—the failure of New York's fists fathers, in a huffing and puffing session, to grant Max Baer a license to fight Bob Pastor for Madison Square Garden, found the Californian preparing today for a fist invasion of England.

Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, said that as a result of the collapse of plans to fight here, he would go through with an agreement with British promoters, including Brig. Gen. Cutcliffe, now in New York with a guarantee of 4,500 pounds for Baer to meet the winner of the Petersen-Farr bout for the British heavyweight title.

L. Herzfeldt of Post Office Squad Takes Series Honors With 656 Count

RAY WEBER of Lecky's hit a 245 for high game and L. Herzfeldt cracked a 636 series to lead bowlers in the A.A.L. league games this week on the A.A.L. alleys. The A.A.L. squad tipped a 1,034 total for high game and the Post Office squad rolled up a 2,850 count for high team series.

Post Office bowlers won three games from the Left Overs as Herzfeldt compiled his 636 series with counts of 213 228 and 210 pins. Elbas turned in a 219 game and 630 series for the Post Office squad and Voegels led the Left Overs scoring with a 215 game and 568 total.

Lecky's won two games from the Old Timers as Weber spilled a 245 game and 632 series. Brueggeman had a 231 game and 649 count for Lecky's and Koppin's 233 game and 582 total were high scores for the Old Timers.

Topping counts of 225, 221 and 190 pins for 636 series, Hagen led the bowlers to two wins over Odd Fellows. Perinette's 582 was high series count and Gorres had a 223 for high game for the Odd Fellows.

Ehlike put together games of 213, 237 and 200 pins for a 650 total to lead the A.A.L. squad to a double win over the league-leading Kasten bowlers. Freude got in the 600 class with a 215 game and 638 series for the A.A.L. team and Kostitzke rolled a 215 game and 595 series to lead the Kasten scoring.

The newest entries are Waupaca, New London, Ford V-8's, Greenwoods of Kaukauna and Kimberly Stockbridge is expected to enter as result of the Legion entering a team in the Stockbridge tournament. Ten teams entered the meet last Sunday at a meeting at Little Chute.

The tournament committee also has announced that Bill Pickett of Appleton has been released of his

Interest in Conservation At New High, Claflin Says

Post Crescent Outdoor Editor

There never was a time in the history of this country when conservation of our natural assets was more in the minds of the people than at present. From deer down to the smallest game birds and fishes discussions are rampant as to whether this or that animal, bird or fish should be put on the protected list, whether or not bag limits should be decreased; whether or not more fish hatcheries should be installed by the state, and what if anything, can be done to stem the tide of wildlife decension.

At the same time the state is suing for more tourist business. The value of this great industry, which stands second only to the dairy business in Wisconsin, appears now to be properly recognized. Rather than do the right amount of advertising as Minnesota does, it is proposed to fall in line with thirty six other states and provide special fishing licenses at a reduced rate for visitors.

Many sportsmen think this is merely taking the line of least resistance and that there is nothing constructive in the proposition. The point seems to be well taken that the state should maintain a non-resident license charge of $3 for the reason that to cheapen the

Minnesota Cagers Emulate Winning Ways of Gridders

Lost Three Pre-Conference Games but Now are in Pennant Fight

BY EARL HILLIGAN
CHICAGO (P)—Picking 'em off the backboards around the Big Ten:

Fans have become accustomed to great Minnesota football teams during the last few years, but the way the Gophers kicked the basketball dope bucket around this winter has Big Ten cage fans gasping. . . . The Northmen have battled to a little contending position with seven wins and two defeats and haven't made the pre-season forecasts look any too good.

In their warm-up campaign, Minnesota's cagers were not impressive. . . . They won from Carleton, Creighton and Iowa State, but were whupped by North Dakota State, Kansas State and Nebraska. . . . The Gophers barely defeated Chicago in their opener and then lost a one point decision to Ohio State. And it looked as though Coach Dave McMillan's tenth season would be as dismal as most of the others.

Then, with little Johnny Kundia and Gordon Addington supplying the spark, Minnesota went to work, whipping Northwestern, Ohio State, Purdue, Wisconsin and Iowa. Purdue took a one-point decision at LaFayette before the Gophers won No. 7 at Iowa's expense. . . . With three low-ranking teams, Wisconsin, Northwestern and Chicago still to be met, the Minnesota title chances look bright.

Indiana, which shared the title last season with Purdue, has been the big disappointment with its five won-five lost performance. . . . Yet the Hoosiers, with 363 points scored in 10 games, have the third best offensive record in the conference topped only by Purdue and Illinois. The loss of Vern Huffman, ill of the flu, is just another of the numerous injuries and illness blows the Everett Dean team has suffered this year.

Lou Boudreau, the sophomore forward who came to Illinois as one of the best prospects in years hasn't let the boys down. . . . The Harvey, Ill. youth repeatedly has sparked the Illini to victory and in 10 games has scored 30 field goals and 14 free throws. . . . And has had only 12 personal fouls called on him.

cost of anything often tends to lower sales. It is undoubtedly true that to notify visitors from other states that license fees have been reduced in their favor would have the effect of causing them to think fishing had depreciated accordingly.

Many sportsmen are skeptical as to the benefits of hatcheries. They feel that results have by no means been commensurate with the expense involved in operating them. No one should criticize the value of hatcheries, providing the young fish are reared in captivity to a size insuring their welfare after they are released.

Need More Protection
One prominent angler of the Fox river valley maintains, however, that in the case of stream trout, even though they are reared in rearing ponds until they become "fingerlings," meaning fish from about two inches up, restocking waters with hatchery products has not proven to be a successful venture. He claims that what we need is more protection, and closed seasons for at least alternate years.

A number of hunters have asked the writer recently if an open season on deer will be granted for 1937. Of course, no one can answer that as yet. But one thing is beyond dispute, and that is, deer in Wisconsin are no more plentiful than in northern Michigan. Some of the counties in the upper peninsula—Delta and Alger—are advocating very strongly closing the deer season for two years, and for alternate years thereafter, with hunting being permitted to take either a buck or doe.

Their reason for wanting an open season for either a buck or doe is undoubtedly that the does are being slaughtered indiscriminately as they are in Wisconsin. With such a law they feel as do many Wisconsin hunters that the deer population would be increased by an open season on does which hunter to attach his leg to one of them, rather than leaving them lying in the woods after they are shot.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN
By FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Count Vronski, who is trying to force Anne Phelps to marry him, is shot to death in her studio apartment shortly before a late party starts. Bigelow, the young American from Paris, finds Anne and Karsanokoff, the stunning dancer, staring at the corpse. They hide it in a cupboard and go on with the party. Later Bigelow and Dr. Austrelitz, the psychologist, remove the body to Vronski's apartment which they find ransacked. The next day Bigelow meets Anne at the Colony for lunch to report on his gruesome task.

CHAPTER 14
THE NEWS BREAKS
BIGELOW ordered two side-cars and some iced grapefruit and chicken a la king. "One can always eat that without difficulty," he explained as the waiter left them. "And they'll have to fix it to order, so we'll have time to talk."

"Talk then, for God's sake!" cried Anne. "I've been waiting all night to find out what happened. I could hardly resist calling you up in the early hours of the morning. Talk about suspense!" She pressed out the end of her cigarette and lighted another.

"But I told you, everything occurred practically according to plan," said he. "But what do you mean by 'practically according to plan'? What went wrong?"

"Nothing, really," he assured her, and told her in detail exactly what had occurred. She sat listening with her eyes fixed on his face. "Awful!" she whispered. "when the policeman passed. And that knock came on the door! I wonder you didn't both die of fright. I'm sure I should have! Poor Dr. Austrelitz! Did you realize he took his job on without asking a single awkward question or registering a word of complaint?"

"He's very clever. There was nothing he needed to ask," said Bigelow. "And he isn't the sort to complain when one asks him a favor."

"A favor--?" repeated Anne grimly. "Suppose the police trace him? Suppose that policeman noticed his license number or recognized him?"

"I don't think that's likely and neither does he," answered Bigelow. "But suppose it happens! Unlikely things often do!"

"He'll say he knew Vronski--that Vronski was a patient. And that when he got home from the party last night, he found Vronski waiting for him at his place--very drunk. And he took him home."

Anne considered. "But that would have been about five o'clock. Haven't they ways of finding out from a medical examination that he died before that?"

"They can't tell exactly. They can only form an opinion. In any case, if they did suspect Austrelitz, they wouldn't be able to discover a motive."

"No, I suppose not. But he might get a good deal of undesirable publicity."

"He can look after himself. Don't worry about that," said Bigelow. The waiter approached with the cocktails and the grapefruit.

A Key Changes Hands
"Who is giving the dinner party tonight?" asked Bigelow, making conversation.

"Philip Whitelaw," answered Anne, playing up. "I don't think you know him. He's in Wall Street. A typical business man, I mean a cross between a pirate and a Puritan. Fascinating combination. You never quite know where one is going to leave off and the other begin. His mental processes are enthralling when one can follow them." Her eyes rested distractedly on the waiter who was still fussing about.

"How old is he?" asked Bigelow. "Thirty-six. And he's never been married. And he's most suitable in every way--I'm told. Quite nice looking, too, although he has to swim and play golf to keep his waistline in check."

Anne finished off her cocktail and lighted another cigarette. "I think I can see him," nodded Bigelow.

"What mother calls safe. She's always hoped to marry him in the end. She's alarmed at the way the world is moving on and feels uneasy about the future. And I must say things do seem to be in a mess everywhere, don't they?"

The waiter--having supplied them with everything they could possibly want--departed at last. Anne breathed a sigh of relief.

"I forgot to tell you how sorry I am that I let go, last night," she said. "I usually have myself better in hand than that. And I think I can promise there'll be no further demonstrations of mid-Victorianism."

"I think I liked it," said Bigelow. "Yes, I suppose men do! Some men. Nice men! And I can't deny it was a relief to have you handy to lean on. But one must not encourage such feebleness of spirit in oneself. That's why I determined to lunch here under the eyes of the world--my world. I mean, of course, I'm trying to behave exactly as if nothing had happened."

"You're doing beautifully," said Bigelow, with a sly glance at her. "I mean--there was a towel, wasn't there? ... And the gun?"

"They are still locked in the cupboard and I have the key. If you'll give me the key to the front door as well, I'll drop in there after lunch and remove all traces. I suppose you have a license to possess a gun?"

"Yes, Philip got it for me. It was his idea that I keep a gun at the studio for protection. He hated my staying there so much alone. Funny, isn't it? If there had been no gun there, all this probably wouldn't have happened. So she's directly responsible."

She took the key from her bag and passed it under the table surreptitiously. Bigelow slipped it into his pocket.

"Thanks. And if anyone should inquire at any time, you had a gun but it was stolen some time ago--by some cleaner who came in--or a tradesman or delivery boy--or perhaps by a guest at a party. You noticed it was gone, but you never bothered to do anything about it as you had only kept it there to please Whitelaw and never really felt the need of it."

She nodded. "I see. The gun is going to disappear completely?"

"And forever--I hope," said Bigelow. "By means of the science of ballistics, they can often tell, nowadays, whether a given bullet was fired from a given gun. But if the gun isn't available, of course, the bullet alone tells them nothing."

"I see," said Anne. "Let's eat. Here comes Topsy."

The Baroness Watches Anne
Mrs. Kane drew near, waving for a waiter to bring a chair.

"Don't look now," she said, putting Bigelow back into his seat with one firm plump hand, "but if you want to see what I looked like when I first blew in from Kansas, just let your optics roam lightly over my sister-in-law. She's sitting on my right at my table. And you'll know what starts the cyclones."

Anne smiled. "Your sister-in-law? Is she really, Topsy?"

"Well, I hope you didn't think I chose her out of all the world to be my friend," murmured Topsy. "That's Kate Kane herself in person and no mistake about it. Of course, she's a bit of a flirt."

European Demand Halts Decline
In Wheat Trade

Quotations in Chicago Carried to Lowest Levels
In Months

Chicago (AP)—Revival of European demand for Argentine and Canadian wheat halted a 3 to 5 cents break in Chicago grain prices today that carried values in some cases to the lowest levels in 1 to 3 months.

Wheat dropped 3 cents and May 95 cents, the latter the maximum permitted in one day, but rallied when cables reported Argentine sales to Germany and United Kingdom and rumored purchases by Spain and Italy. Heavy selling of wheat futures the first three hours was attributed to forecast of further moisture relief in the domestic southwestern wheat belt.

Wheat closed 14-15 cents below yesterday's finish, May 1.30-1.31, July 1.13-1.14, and corn 1.14-1.15, May 1.13-1.14, July 1.01-1.02, Oats 1.14-1.15, rye 1.14-1.15, and provisions were 2 cents lower to 10 higher.

No Action Seen on Proposed Tax on Cigarettes, Cigars

Some other revenue raising plan so long as it produces $5,000,000 a year. He said a cigarette tax was suggested because it would offer a stable base of revenue.

Stanley Slag of Edgerton, representing the Wisconsin Leaf Tobacco Dealers and Growers Association, said the estimates of the yield were too optimistic and that the experience of other states indicates the tax plan would raise only one-third of what the league figured.

Slag said tobacco ranks fifth among Wisconsin crops and is grown in 22 counties. He argued that the growers are just getting back where they can make a profit, but will find this wiped out if a tax is imposed.

Cities Federal Taxes

Slag was supported by two Edgerton dealers, C. W. Mervin and Oscar Jensen. Mervin said federal taxes on cigarettes are so high that any additional tax would have to be passed on to the smokers. He predicted this would demoralize business in counties bordering on adjoining states that have no such tax.

Herbert L. Mount, of Milwaukee, recorded Wisconsin pharmacists as opposed to the entire revenue plan, which he said would hit persons of small income and reduce their purchasing power.

Officials of the league of municipalities, including President J. H. Wallis, mayor of Rice Lake, Mayor Henry Hanson of Platteville, assistant city attorney John J. Dolan of Milwaukee and Mayor James R. Law of Madison, stressed the appropriateness of the bill.

All said the state should relieve the real estate taxpayer by sharing a substantial part of high school costs. The bill would apportion the revenues on a basis of $25 for each pupil.

And a new campaign is on, from the same headquarters, against the movie scenes in which intoxicants are consumed unnecessarily and promiscuously. If a cocktail is essential to the plot, it's all right. But a cocktail poured just to give hands gets the frown. But Nick already has an "ou" for "After the Thin Man" left him an expectant father. And what could be sweeter than a climb on the wagon for the bairn's sake?

Basil Rathbone's secret ambition is to play "Lafayette"—taking the story from the time of the hero's farewell to Washington. It's a bad idea to set your heart on a role, however. I remember Ralph Bellamy once picked out a story he said he'd give his right arm to play. He was so keen about it he'd scarcely mention it for fear some company would discover it and snatch it away from him. Well, Victor McLaglen played it and the story was "The Informer".

I must ask Garbo, next time I drop in for tea, whether this current item is true: that she turned down "The Garden of Allah" as a vehicle on the grounds that a man would leave her to return to a monastery.

Report Roosevelt Backs Amendment To Constitution

Washington (AP)—Usually well-informed persons said today President Roosevelt was considering the use of his supreme court reorganization proposal as a weapon to force action on a constitutional amendment.

The chief executive was reported reliably to have discussed with congressional leaders the possibility of enacting his court bill with a clause making its operation conditional on failure to amend the constitution within a given time.

Senators who have talked with the president recently said he had no specific constitutional amendment in mind. He was described as preferring one to limit the court's jurisdiction rather than one to extend federal power over industry and agriculture.

It was said, however, he had reached no decision on combining the bill with an amendment and was unlikely to do so for some time. He is expected to await developments before making any new moves.

Doubtful About Vote

Senate leaders were understood to have advised Mr. Roosevelt: it was doubtful whether they could set sufficient votes to approve any of the constitutional amendments so far proposed.

Word that the chief executive had discussed the alternate proposal has the first intimation he might agree to make any change in his recommendation or increase the supreme court unless older justices retire.

Heretofore, those who talked with him said he was determined to push through his reorganization plan without substantial change because he believed it was the only way the objectives of his administration could be realized within a reasonable time.

Under the alternate proposal he still would have assurance of a constitutional amendment was adopted. An amendment would be submitted to the people at the same time the reorganization bill was enacted, or earlier.

Would Seek Delay

The court bill then would carry a provision delaying its effective date until sometime next year, with a clause that it would not go into effect even then, if the constitutional amendment meanwhile had been ratified.

Among some of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers there was hope that the National Conference on Constitutional Amendment, called for March 18, might bring some agreement, at least among the liberal group, for the form an amendment should take.

The conference committee announced today a three-day program with a list of noted speakers. They said the meeting was sponsored by 92 leaders of labor, education, government, law, journalism, religion and agriculture.

Senator Norris (I-Nebr.), will be the permanent chairman and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York will be temporary chairman.

Plans for the national jamboree were considered and it was decided that all scouts from Wisconsin would travel in a special train to the affair.

Oshkosh (AP)—J. H. Alexander, state director of recreational facilities, last night predicted an increased tourist business for Wisconsin this year.

"Gasoline tax receipts increased over $1,000,000 last summer," he said, "and non-resident fishing licenses increased 40 per cent."

with you today, Anne?" Mrs. Kane rose.

"So did I," said Anne, "but we were both mistaken. She had her maid call me up this morning and put me off."

"Got a better offer," decided Topsy, nodding her head as she departed.

As Anne and Bigelow started out a few minutes later, they ran into the Baroness Dormstadt and Chet Harrison at the door. They were both very much excited.

"Have you heard? Isn't it ghastly?" cried Chet.

"Well," asked Anne, steeling herself for what the news must be coming. She felt the baroness's sharp eyes fixed on her.

"The news about Vronski," said Chet. "We just read it in the papers. He's been killed!"

Anne's color receded and she repeated through dry lips, "Killed?"

It wasn't acting. Although she had been prepared for it, the situation was requiring all her courage and she felt a sudden terror of the baroness who was eying her so mercilessly and saying nothing.

"Shot in his own apartment sometime last night," Chet rattled on. "His valet found him this morning."
